INTRODUCTION

The classification standard for the Auditing Group is a point-rating and level description plan consisting of an introduction, definition of the Scientific and Professional Category and the occupational group, rating scales and bench-marks.

Point rating is an analytical, quantitative method of determining the relative values of jobs. Point-rating plans define characteristics or factors common to the jobs being evaluated, define degrees of each factor and allocate point values to each degree. The total value determined for each job is the sum of the point values assigned by the raters.

A level description method is used to evaluate jobs at the AU-6 level. This involves a comparison of the total job being evaluated to the benchmark positions at that level.

All methods of job evaluation require the exercise of judgment and the orderly collection and analysis of information in order that consistent judgments can be made.

Factors, Point Weighting and Distribution

The combined factors *may not describe all aspects of jobs. They deal only with those characteristics that can be defined and distinguished and that are useful in determining the relative worth of jobs. Four factors are used in this plan. The weighting of each factor reflects its relative importance.

Rating Scales

In the rating plan the following factors, factor weights and point values are used.

Factors	Factor Weights	Point Values
		Minimum	Maximum
Knowledge	35	70	256
Responsibility for Activities	35	70	256
Responsibility for Contacts	16.5	30	120
Operational Responsibility	13.5	15	100
	100	185	732

Bench-marks

Bench-mark position descriptions are used to exemplify degrees of factors. Each description consists of a list of the principal duties and specifications describing the degree of each factor to which the position is rated. The bench-mark positions have been evaluated and the degree and point values assigned for each factor are shown in the specifications.

The rating scales identify the bench-mark position descriptions that exemplify each degree. These descriptions are an integral part of the point-rating plan and are used to ensure consistency in applying the rating scales.

Bench-mark position descriptions 16 and 17 are provided for a whole job comparison at the AU-6 level and have not been evaluated against each of the factors.

Use of the Standard

There are six steps in the application of this classification standard.

1. The position description is studied to ensure understanding of the position as a whole. The relation of the position being rated to positions above and below it in the organization is also studied.
2. Allocation of the position to the category and the group is confirmed by reference to the definitions and the descriptions of inclusions and exclusions.
3. Tentative degrees of each factor in the position being rated are determined by comparison with degree definitions in the rating scales. Uniform application of degree definitions requires frequent reference to the description of factors and the notes to raters.
4. The description of the factor in each of the bench-mark positions exemplifying the degree tentatively established is compared with the description of the factor in the position being rated. Comparisons are also made with descriptions of the factor in bench-mark positions for the degrees above and below the one tentatively established.
5. The point values for all factors are added to determine the tentative total point rating.
6. The position being rated is compared as a whole with positions to which similar total point values have been assigned, -as a check on the validity of the total rating.

Note: Positions which are proposed at the AU-6 level should be compared as a whole to Bench-mark position descriptions 16 and 17 after step two.

Determination of Levels

The ultimate objective of job evaluation is the determination of the relative values of jobs in each occupational group. Jobs that fall within a designated range of point values will be regarded as of equal difficulty and will be assigned to the same level.

LEVEL AND LEVEL BOUNDARIES

AU-1	185 - 220
AU-2	221 - 360
AU-3	361 - 500
AU-4	501 - 640
AU-5	641 - 732

Jobs which are deemed equivalent overall to the bench-mark positions at the AU-6 level are to be assigned that level.

CATEGORY DEFINITION

Occupational categories were repealed by the Public Service Reform Act (PSRA), effective April 1, 1993. Therefore, the occupational category definitions have been deleted from the classification standards.

GROUP DEFINITION

For occupational group allocation, it is recommended that you use the Occupational Group Definition Maps, which provide the 1999 group definition and their corresponding inclusion and exclusion statements. The maps explicitly link the relevant parts of the overall 1999 occupational group definition to each classification standard.

KNOWLEDGE

This factor is used to measure the difficulty of the work in terms of the skill and knowledge needed to perform the duties of the position.

Definitions

"Knowledge" refers to understanding of the principles, theories, techniques and practices of accounting, auditing and administration; of program objectives; of the financial structure of the organization audited and their procedures, practices and controlling legislation.

"Skill" refers to the ability to perform work such as analyzing, evaluating and investigating accounting transactions, records and systems; determining compliance with provision of legislation, regulations, contracts or agreements; identifying and devising solutions to problems; discussing and reporting on audit findings; and planning, organizing and controlling audit activities.

Notes to Raters

Skill and knowledge beyond that associated with the minimum qualifications for the group is normally acquired through one or more of the following methods; completion of in-service training courses, on-the-job training under an experienced employee, experience in related work in industry and in other agencies, and experience in related and progressively more responsible jobs within the organization.

The five degrees of the Knowledge factor assigned to bench-marks have been established by the comparative ranking of key positions in the Auditing Group. In applying the standard the degree of the element tentatively selected is to be confirmed by comparing the duties of the position being rated with the duties and specifications of bench-marks.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR ACTIVITIES

This factor is used to measure the difficulty and importance of the work in terms of the scope for the exercise of initiative and judgment and the impact of activities.

Definitions

"Scope for the exercise of initiative and judgment" refers to the freedom to take particular courses of action. It is measured in terms of the availability of direction and the requirement to make decisions, recommendations and proposals within the guidelines provided by program objectives, statutes, regulations, directives and precedents.

"Impact of activities" refers to the importance of proposals, decisions and recommendations in terms of their effect on departmental programs, on the operations of the organization audited and the significance of precedents established.

"Established procedures" is to be interpreted broadly to include the guidance provided by manuals, directives and precedents.

"Program" refers to the plans of action that are developed and implemented by the organization to achieve its objectives.

Notes to Raters

The three degrees of the Impact of Activities element are illustrated by bench-marks. Characteristics of the work such as the following are to be considered in determining the tentative degree of this element.

1. The size and nature of the organization audited. "Size and nature" refers to such considerations as volume of accounting transactions, diversity or specialized character of operations, degree of centralization or decentralization of the accounting function, and the complexity and interrelationships of accounting systems.
2. The extent to which the incumbent is the effective recommending authority, which is usually related to the level of the position in the organization.
3. The extent to which the position requires to provide accounting and other advice to management, other government departments and agencies, and private industry.
4. The consequences of an error in judgment in making interpretations, analyses and evaluations.
5. The effects of recommendations or decisions on the establishment and achievement of objectives of projects and programs, on the operating practices of organizations audited and on public relations.

These characteristics are only an indication of the impact of activities of the position, and the whole context within which the work is performed is to be considered in establishing a tentative degree of the element. The job as a whole is then to be compared with the description of the bench-mark exemplifying the degree of impact that has been tentatively established and with the descriptions of bench-marks immediately above and below that degree.
