PUBLICATIONS CATALOGUE 2005

UNITED NATIONS HUMAN SETTLEMENTS PROGRAMME

In today's urbanizing world, the issues at stake in cities are numerous and complex. UN-HABITAT has been addressing them over the past 30 years by publishing a wide range of information material for researchers, decision makers in central and local governments, and civil society organizations including those at the grass-root level.

This catalogue features over 150 key publications, arranged by theme with their respective bibliographic data and abstracts. Also included are all backlist titles, titles available in electronic format on our online catalogue at www.unhabitat.org, and titles in official United Nations Languages other than English. The catalogue also gives a flavour of forthcoming publications.

In addition to our specifically themed publications, UN-HABITAT's flagship publications, namely, the Global Report on Human Settlements, the State of the World Cities and our quarterly journal Habitat Debate cover a broad spectrum of issues in urban development, governance, land and housing as well as water and sanitation in cities. Therefore, these publications will be found under the general section as well as in the relevant themes.

UN-HABITAT is keen for our partners to have easy access to information that is relevant to their work and our common goal of improving human settlements. If you wish to order any of our publications, please use the order form on the back page, email your request to habitat.publications@unhabitat.org, or use the online catalogue on the Publications page of the website.

Building Bridges through Managing Conflicts and Differences - Part 1

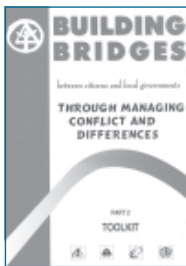

The intent of this training manual is to look at options that can help individuals, groups, organizations, communities, and local governments resolve their differences before they become intractable and destructive. It can be used to train local government officials, civic organization leaders and staff, and interested citizens in the fundamentals of negotiation, mediation and facilitated decision-making processes; increase the knowledge and skills of those who are already working in these roles and believe they can benefit from additional training; conduct orientation sessions for officials and citizens who want to know more about opportunities to manage conflict in their organizations and communities, and help train trainers to train others in the knowledge and skills associated with conflict management practices.

Partnership for Local Capacity Development - Building on the Experiences of City-to-City Cooperation

This publication has been prepared as background documentation for the Dialogue on the “Strengthening of Local Authorities” during the 19th Session of the Governing Council of UN-HABITAT. It is a joint report of UN-HABITAT and the local government community on the benefits of city-to-city learning and mutual support which highlights the broad range and diversity of decentralised cooperation practices, showcases the variety of complementary options for supporting cities in their cooperation, and draws forward looking conclusions regarding opportunities to improve the scope of both decentralised cooperation and international support. The agreed “Partnership for Local Capacity Development (PLCD)” is designed to promote cohesion and collective efficiency in the international support available to the development of local capacities for sustainable urbanisation. This will be accomplished by facilitating joint policy formation between leading international associations of local authorities.

Development of National Technological Capacity for Environmentally Sound Construction

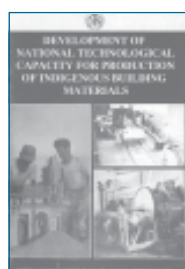

As part of its efforts to promote sustainable construction industry within the framework of its Agenda, UN-HABITAT jointly organized with UNIDO the First Consultation on Construction Industry held in Tunisia in May 1993. This publication consolidates the technical papers prepared by UN-HABITAT for the Consultation. The purpose is two fold; attempting to identify, in detail, the ways in which construction activity contributes to different areas of environmental stress, and considering the means available for reducing adverse environmental impacts through improved technologies and through design or modified practices.

Rights and Reality

Women's equal rights to land, housing and property are recognized in international law and are translated into national law by an increasing number of governments. However, the implementation of these rights into reality on the ground remains an enormous challenge. This book examines the role that women's organizations in Kenya, Tanzania and

Uganda have played in affecting recent law reforms, and provides a detailed analysis of national legislation and policies on land, housing and inheritance in these three countries. It also describes mechanisms used by civil society organizations and paralegal networks to help implement women's equal rights at community level. A historical background of the region and an overview of international human rights instruments are included. The study concludes with specific recommendations, which could help translate women's rights to reality.

Water and Sanitation in the World's Cities: Local Action for Global Goals

The world's governments agreed at the Millennium Summit to halve the number of people who lack access to safe water, mainly in the world's cities, by 2015. With rapidly growing urban populations the challenge is immense. Water and Sanitation in the World's Cities is a comprehensive and authoritative assessment of the problems and how they can be addressed. This influential publication by the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-HABITAT) sets out in detail the scale of inadequate provision of water and sanitation. It describes the impacts on health and economic performance, showing the potential gains of remedial action; it analyses the proximate and underlying causes of poor provision and identifies information gaps affecting resource allocation; it outlines the consequences of further deterioration; and it explains how resources and institutional capacities – public, private and community – can be used to deliver proper services through integrated water resource management.

Financing Adequate Shelter For All

The publication, Financing Adequate Shelter for All, aims at addressing the housing financing problem in developing countries. The publication is the result of two conferences organised by the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) in Gavle, Sweden; and New York, U.S.A., as part of the preparatory process of the United Nations General Assembly Special Session on the Overall Review and Appraisal of the Implementation of the Habitat Agenda. It gives insights into how various countries and organisations are tackling the problem of housing finance for the low-income members of the society and what lessons can be learned from these experiences and models. Five chapters of the book examine the issue of housing finance in developing countries and suggest how to improve housing finance for the poor.

From Structural Adjustment Programmes to Poverty Reduction Strategies

This paper's background is the debate between proponents of pro-growth policies - developed under the form of structural adjustment from the 70s until early 90s - and those advocating poverty reduction strategies, culminating recently in the introduction of Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers (PRSP) in 1999. At the heart of the policy debate is an apparent choice between growth and equity. It explores the choice between economically productive cities and inclusive cities which embrace a comprehensive approach of social development and poverty reduction.

Funding Mechanisms for Low-income Housing - A Case Study of the U.S.A

This monograph is the second in the series prepared by UN-HABITAT with the aim of identifying and sharing experiences of financing housing for low-income people. The first monograph provided a succinct account of the experiences of the Canada's Mortgage and Housing Corporation on the sustainable development and growth of the housing finance system in Canada. The present monograph reviews the historical evolution of the housing financing system in the United States and provides a detailed overview of systems and mechanisms for financing housing for all, with especial emphasis on housing finance for low-income households. It describes the variety of public-private partnership mechanisms employed in making housing available to the different socio-economic strata of the population, the role and contributions of government at both federal and state levels, the local authorities, the banks, and the insurance companies.

Macroeconomic Factors and Urban Growth: An Explanatory Analysis

This study is an attempt to analyze the relationship between macroeconomic factors and urban growth in the contemporary world, selecting 17 countries to provide some insights. It reviews current thinking on the relationship between stabilization policies and economic growth. In addition, it points to new insights into the theory of investment behaviour, which is central to formulating appropriate macroeconomic policies meant to promote sustainable urbanization.

Re-establishing Effective Housing Finance Mechanisms in Tanzania: The Potentials and the Bottlenecks

The degree of success and efficiency of housing production and delivery depends on the prevailing legal, institutional and financial framework. Housing finance credit mechanisms are generally weak in most developing countries because of low-income levels, weak regulatory and legal framework provisions for land title and tenure system, absence of effective laws governing credit and absence of credit rating systems. This report, using Tanzania as a case study, reviews the institutional housing finance development constraints in most developing countries and assesses the feasibility and sustainability of developing a housing finance credit mechanism in similar countries.

Support Measures to Promote Rental Housing for Low-income Groups

Despite a recent upsurge in research on rental housing, there is still scant information about the mechanisms of rental housing supply in developing countries, the rationale behind housing choice, landlord-tenant relations, the effects of government policy, and the operation of the law. This publication attempts to fill some of these information gaps and it is based on a review of the literature on rental housing in the third world cities and on three specially commissioned reports on rental housing in the cities of Benin, Cairo and Delhi

Slums of the World: The Face of Urban Poverty in the New millennium?

The current paper presents the results of a first global enumeration of slums at the country level. The data are analysed and comparisons made at sub-regional and regional levels while trying to understand what is happening globally. This document is the culmination of attempts to come to grips with changes in the way we measure slums, starting by providing an agreed –universal– definition of this type of settlements and a clear methodological approach. The preliminary estimations presented in this document represent a baseline year level that permits the preparation of quantitative estimates for future trends. By providing the methodology and the quantitative knowledge base, the document strives to enhance the use of information on urban poverty, as a powerful policy-making tool to help induce the desired structural changes for poverty alleviation.

Global Report on Human Settlements 2003: The Challenge of Slums

This year's report entitled "The Challenge of Slums", is packed with statistics and figures on our rapidly urbanizing world, in which the total number of people currently living in slums is estimated at 928 million. This figure will grow at an accelerated rate if no policy action is taken now. In a detailed review, the report addresses growing global concern about slums, in line with the recently adopted United Nations Millennium Declaration which aims, among other development priorities, to eradicate extreme poverty and hunger and to significantly improve the lives of at least 100 million slum dwellers by the year 2020. The report shows the way forward and identifies the most promising approaches to achieving the United Nations Millennium Development Goals for improving the lives of slum dwellers by scaling up participatory slum upgrading and poverty reduction programmes. This global report is an essential tool and reference work for researchers, academics, planners, public authorities and civil society organisations around the world.

Cities - Engines of Economic Development

The publication reports on the proceedings of the parallel event organized by UN-HABITAT on “Cities-engines of Economic Development” at the UNCTAD XI-URBIS meeting in Sao Paulo, Brazil in June 2004. Its contributing authors discuss various facets of urban development and economy to stimulate wider sharing of knowledge on macroeconomic and urban development policy making and implementation.

Compilation of Selected Adjudications on Housing Rights

A compilation of selected court cases related to housing rights and other adjudication from national and international legal institutions, including the European Court of Human Rights. The report also contains excerpts of national legislation critically reviewed by the United Nations Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights.

Developing a Performance Management System for Local Governments

The report provides clients with practical, step-by-step guidelines on how to build and implement a performance monitoring system as an integral part of their own development strategies, programmes and services. The volume presents techniques, measurement tools, analytical methods and reporting procedures to guide clients through the design and implementation process. Lastly, the report explains the potential uses of performance information for decision-making and strengthening public accountability.

Environmental Assessment Requirements: A Guide for UN-HABITAT Supported Activities

The purpose of the guidelines is to ensure that those involved with UN HABITAT programmes address environmental issues from the start in their project management. If this is done from planning and decision making to monitoring and evaluation it will minimize the adverse impacts that development projects might have on the environment. The guidelines are drawn from UN-HABITAT’s field experience, existing environmental management and assessment knowledge and a variety of environmental guide sources including those of other United Nations agencies and donors such as CIDA, SIDA, DFID, IFA, World Bank.

A Methodology for Participatory Review and Assessment

UN-HABITAT, through its Best Practices and Local Leadership Programme, has implemented a pilot project to document outstanding urban policies and laws to support attainment of the Millennium Development Goals. This publication presents the process for doing this with key findings from studies carried out in several countries and results of key meetings including the World Urban Forum II Dialogue on Urban Realities which showcased six outstanding policies and legislation.

Herramientas para promover la transparencia en la gobernanza local

This publication, which is linked to the Global Campaign on Urban Governance, shows the main obstacles to achieving transparency in local government, and other institutions. It presents guidelines for enhancing transparency, improving access to information and public participation, and promoting ethics, professionalism and integrity.

Indicators for Managing Cities: Case Studies

This volume presents case studies of how local and national governments in both developing and developed countries are successfully building monitoring capacity in their municipal strategic plans, programming and budgeting. Each case assesses how indicators have been selected, analyzed and ultimately used for urban policy and management decisions.

Indigenous Peoples’ Right to Adequate Housing: A Global Overview

A preliminary effort to identify whether, and to what extent, indigenous peoples enjoy the right to adequate housing in different regions of the world. It includes seven case studies on the status of housing for indigenous peoples – in practice and in law – and reviews policies and programmes aimed at addressing their disadvantage. It also provides a comprehensive set of recommendations on improving the housing and living conditions of indigenous peoples, and calls for further attention to be given to this critical human rights concern.

Kenya Urban Sector Profile

The Kenya Urban Sector Study is a rapid appraisal of urban sector needs in Kenya. Topics covered include Governance, Slums, Gender and Environment.

Local Economic Development Series

The new series is aimed at local governments and their partners in the private, public and community sectors involved in improving local economic development. The books present strategic planning guidance on how to involve local people from all sectors work together to stimulate local commercial activity to create decent jobs, improve lives, particularly the poor and marginalized and achieve a resilient and sustainable economy.

Local Elected Leadership Training Series

The roles and responsibilities of local elected leaders have changed in many areas (economic, political, social, environmental, cultural and technological). This directly affects local government and its ability to deliver clean water, improve sanitation, alleviate poverty, provide public health and safety and manage a myriad of other community-based services. The new series of four handbooks is aimed at enhancing the local governments' capacity in a number of areas including policy making, negotiating, managing finances, and leadership.

National Housing Rights Legislation

This compilation contains constitutional clauses on housing rights including full texts or excerpts of selected legislation on housing from several States representing a variety of legal, political, economic and cultural systems and traditions. While not comprehensive, it illustrates the various means by which States have chosen to include housing rights, including their obligations regarding international instruments, within their domestic legal systems.

Post-Conflict Land Management

Based on UN-HABITAT's experience in addressing land administration issues in several post-conflict situations, this book is a tool for practitioners entering the field. It suggests a range of recommended activities from the emergency through reconstruction to development stages.

Report of the Inter-regional Conference on Urban-Rural Linkages: Approach to Development

A report on urban-rural conference, held on the occasion of World Habitat Day 2004 in Nairobi, to promote awareness among national economic and social development decision-makers and planners, policy advisers and other rural-urban development actors, of the need to enhance balanced territorial development of both rural and urban areas.

SCP - Sri Lanka

This booklet captures lessons learned from the Sustainable Cities Programme in Sri Lanka and focuses especially on Demonstration Projects about waste and water.

The Sustainable Cities Programme in Tanzania 1993-2003

This is an account of how the Sustainable Cities Programme (SCP) was implemented in Tanzania during the past ten years. The SCP, a joint initiative of the UN-HABITAT and UNEP to implement Agenda 21, was established in 1991. The document shows how the environmental planning and management (EPM) project under the Sustainable Dares-Salaam Project from 1992 was replicated in other urban centers in Tanzania and illustrates how city planning and management can be carried out in collaborative and inclusive manner.

UN-HABITAT's Strategy for the Implementation of the Millennium Development Goal 7, target 11

The United Nations Millennium Declaration and its goal 7, target 11 on slums aims to significantly improve the lives of at least 100 million slum dwellers by the year 2020. The United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-HABITAT) is the focal point within the United Nations system for the implementation of target 11 as well as for global monitoring of progress towards this target. This strategy gives an overall vision of the strategy that has been adopted by UN-HABITAT to ensure that the Millennium Development Goals, especially those that target the urban poor directly, become an integral part of the priorities and actions of its different organisational units.

Urbanization Challenges in Sub-Saharan Africa

The report highlights priorities to meet the challenges of the fastest urbanizing region of the world. Decentralisation, good governance, empowerment of local authorities and inclusive processes of resources allocation and decision making are identified as fundamental prerequisites for sustainable development.
