Section I: The Minister's Message

December 12, 2003 was a critical day in the history of Canadian public safety and security. On that day, the Prime Minister announced the creation of a new Department of Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness (PSEPC), integrating into one focal point the Government's key public safety and security responsibilities, all under the direction of one lead Cabinet Minister. In February 2004, the Government again reiterated its commitment to public safety in the Speech from the Throne, wherein it clearly stated "there is no more fundamental role for government than the protection of its citizens."

PSEPC integrates the core activities of the former Department of the Solicitor General with those of the Office of Critical Infrastructure Protection and Emergency Preparedness, and the National Crime Prevention Centre. It provides me with portfolio-wide strategic policy advice, and supports me in giving effective direction to the agencies responsible for national security, policing and law enforcement, border services, and corrections and conditional release.

The new department is part of the Portfolio of Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness, which also includes the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the Canadian Security Intelligence Service, the Correctional Service of Canada, the Canada Firearms Centre, the National Parole Board, the newly created Canada Border Services Agency and three review bodies.

This has been an important year for the public safety community in Canada. With the reorganization announced on December 12, 2003, the Government has made significant progress in enhancing the safety and security of Canadians. By placing a broad continuum of agencies dedicated to safety and security within the same portfolio, the Government has provided the means for these agencies to work together seamlessly.

Gathering all this expertise under one banner allows for better integration across the public safety spectrum, linking front-end measures such as national security, emergency preparedness, crime prevention, community policing and border management with remedial interventions such as law enforcement, corrections and conditional release.

The new Portfolio will help ensure a balanced approach to criminal justice, national security and public safety that protects Canadians' fundamental rights and freedoms. It is founded on the understanding that to effectively combat crime, we need to invest both in preventative measures to help communities address social problems before they lead to criminal activity, and in law enforcement and community reintegration for offenders.

The Government of Canada recognizes the need to maximize our readiness to respond to disasters rapidly and efficiently. To that end, the scope of the Department's mandate allows us to better coordinate with provincial and territorial partners and respond rapidly and effectively to an incident, be it a terrorist attack, natural disaster or any other nationally significant public safety emergency.

In the past year, the Government has made significant progress on key safety and security initiatives. It has, among other things, tabled Canada's first integrated National Security Policy, tabled legislation to improve the effectiveness of the correctional system, launched teams of law enforcement experts to detect major capital markets fraud, increased funding for First Nations policing and interoperable information sharing, improved border security with the launch of more Integrated Border Enforcement Teams and supported crime prevention projects reaching communities across Canada.

In our continuing efforts to meet the safety and security challenges of a new environment, I am pleased to have the additional support of a Parliamentary Secretary who will work to support the Government's broadened public safety agenda.

Your comments and suggestions on our Report on Plans and Priorities are welcome. Further information, including departmental contacts and our Internet address, can be found on page 59. Each of the portfolio agencies, with the exception of the CSIS, prepares its own report to Parliament. You are invited to consult their respective documents for more information.

Public safety and emergency preparedness are priorities for the Government. This new Department has an ambitious agenda, one that Canadians expect us to pursue with their best interests in mind. Building on the initiatives, activities and successes achieved over the past few years, I am confident that the Department will be better able to work towards fulfilling its mandate of ensuring a just and safe society, in which Canadians are protected from threats to personal safety, while maintaining the rights and freedoms on which Canada's open society depends.

Section II: Deputy Minister's Message

I am pleased to present the first Report on Plans and Priorities for the new Department of Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness (PSEPC). This report covers key plans, priorities and expected results for the period 2004/2005 – 2006/2007.

PSEPC provides leadership on national security, crisis and emergency management, critical infrastructure protection, crime prevention, policing and law enforcement policy, and corrections and conditional release policy.

Each of these public policy areas is of critical importance to public safety in Canada. Their incorporation into one federal department underscores not only the complexity of challenges we face in maintaining Canada as a safe and secure nation but, more centrally, they underscore a common denominator – the imperative of strengthening public safety and emergency preparedness in Canada through comprehensive and collaborative approaches.

From a departmental perspective, our responsibilities have been clearly set before us. Now is the time to move forward with a dynamic, achievable and responsible plan of action. The 2004-2005 Report on Plans and Priorities (RPP) outlines a clear direction for the new department. It lays the foundation for our work over the next three years and communicates to Parliament and to Canadians the obligation we hold and the commitment we have made to continuously balance our approach to enhancing public safety and security with the benefits of an open society.

The 2004-2005 RPP builds on the existing priorities of the former Department of the Solicitor General and the Departments of Justice and National Defence, with the latter two related specifically to the National Crime Prevention Centre and the Office of Critical Infrastructure Protection and Emergency Preparedness respectively. That said, these existing priorities have been given a new focus and sharpness owing to their integration into one home. Readers will therefore note that pre-existing priorities have been consolidated to better reflect the new mandate and direction of this department. A crosswalk illustrating this consolidation may be found on page 40.

In rising to many new challenges, our new Department must maintain as its primary role service to Parliament and to Canadians through the Minister and the Parliamentary Secretary. Likewise, we also commit to working closely with our colleagues in other federal departments and agencies, the provinces and territories, and our key stakeholders across the private and non-profit sectors in the cause of public safety.

PSEPC also understands that there is a direct connection between the policies and services we undertake and the demonstration of results achieved. Policy making and service delivery is about choices and this is why a commitment to rigorous financial accountability is at our core. This is also why the activities in which we engage must consistently meet the standards set for expenditure planning, control and oversight, due diligence and value for money. In this context, meaningful accountability is achieved when the choices made are those that focus on results for Canadians and when reporting to Parliament is based on sound information and lessons learned.

Section II: Deputy Minister's Message

As the Clerk of the Privy Council recently noted in the Eleventh Annual Report to the Prime Minister, transformation is an integral component of the Public Service. The continual realignment of operations with new priorities, the achievement of results, and then realignment again speaks to the need for responsiveness and adaptability while ensuring that rigour is applied to all that we do. To meet these expectations, PSEPC will continue to promote a modern Public Service within its ranks, one that is citizen-focussed and actively engaged in continuous learning, innovation, collaboration and responsible choices.

Margaret Bloodworth
Deputy Minister
Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness Canada

Section III: Portfolio and Departmental Overview

(a) Portfolio Overview

The Portfolio of Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness is responsible within the Government of Canada for crisis and emergency preparedness, national security, policing and law enforcement, oversight, corrections and conditional release, crime prevention, critical infrastructure protection and border protection. These responsibilities were previously held by the former Solicitor General Canada, the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency, the Canadian Food Inspection Agency, as well as the departments of National Defence, Justice, and Citizenship and Immigration Canada.

The Portfolio includes the Department of Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness and six agencies: the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the Canadian Security Intelligence Service, the Correctional Service of Canada, the National Parole Board, the Canada

Firearms Centre and the newly created Canada Border Services Agency. Being accountable includes providing effective ongoing oversight to key Portfolio functions. Housed within the Portfolio are three review bodies: the RCMP External Review Committee, the Commission for Public Complaints against the RCMP and the Office of the Correctional Investigator.

Together, these organizations have a total annual budget of $4.9 billion and just over 52,000 employees. Each Portfolio Agency, with the exception of CSIS, prepares an individual RPP. For further information on these reports, addresses for each organization's website are provided below.

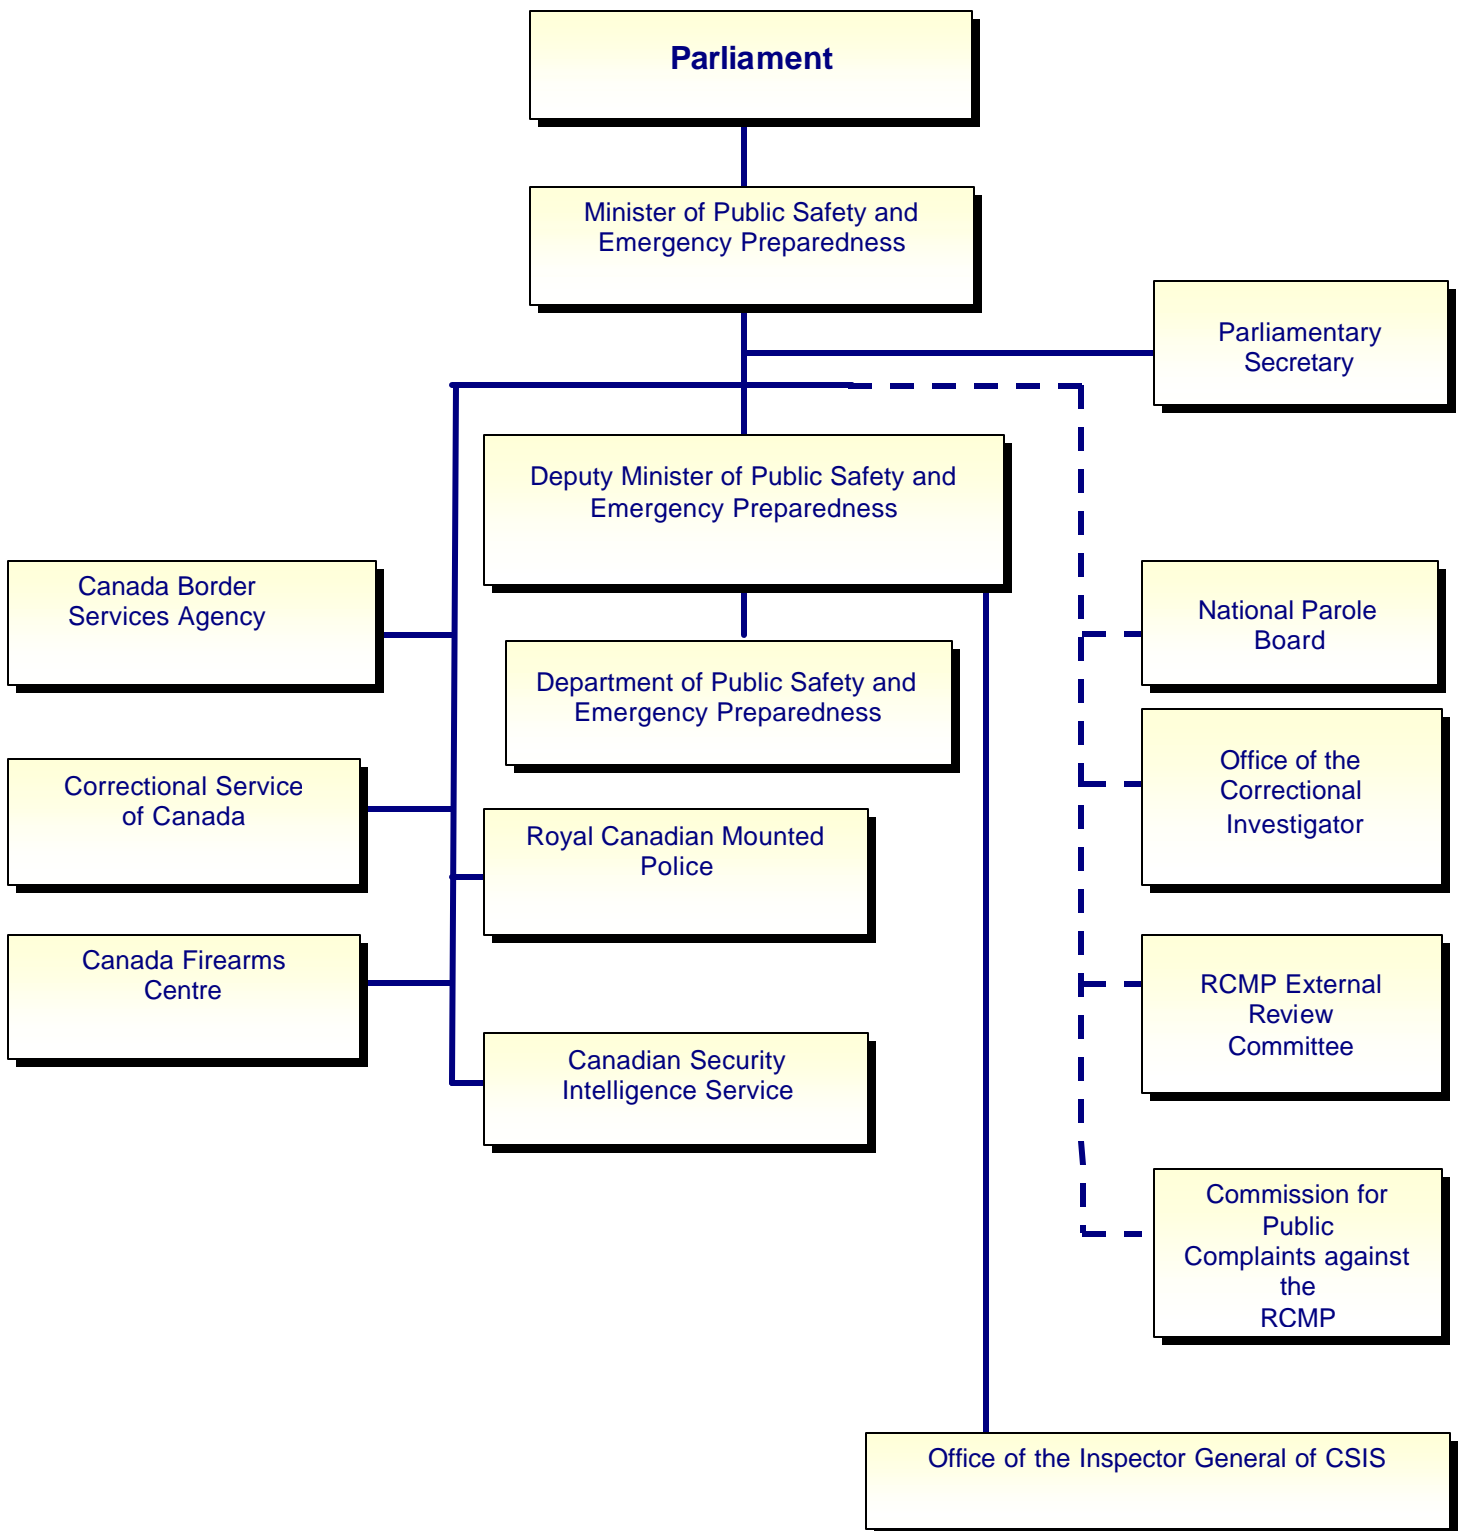

The Department, Portfolio Agencies and Review Bodies contribute individually and collectively to the public safety and emergency preparedness agenda as outlined here.

- The Department – known as PSEPC – provides strategic policy advice, delivers a broad range of national emergency preparedness, critical infrastructure protection and community safety programs and services. It supports the Minister in all aspects of her mandate including providing national public safety leadership, direction to the Agencies and ensuring the Agencies' accountability to the Minister and to Parliament. Also situated within the Department is the Office of the Inspector General of the Canadian Security Intelligence Service (CSIS), which provides an internal audit function on the exercise of CSIS's compliance with the law, Ministerial direction and operational policy. www.psepc.gc.ca
- The Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) enforces Canadian laws, prevents crime and maintains peace, order and security. The RCMP has responsibility to: prevent, detect and investigate offences against federal statutes; maintain law and order and prevent, detect and investigate crime in provinces, territories and municipalities where the Force has a policing contract; provide investigative and protective services to other federal departments and agencies; and provide all Canadian law enforcement agencies with specialized police training and research, forensic laboratory services, identification services and informatics technology. www.rcmp.gc.ca

- The Canadian Security Intelligence Service (CSIS) investigates and reports on activities that may reasonably be suspected of constituting threats to the security of Canada. CSIS also provides security assessments, on request, to all federal departments and agencies. www.csis-scrc.gc.ca
- The Correctional Service of Canada (CSC) contributes to the protection of society by actively encouraging offenders to become law-abiding citizens while exercising reasonable, safe, secure and humane control. CSC is responsible for managing offenders in federal correctional institutions and under community supervision, sentenced to two years or more. www.csc-scc.gc.ca
- The National Parole Board (NPB) is an independent, quasi-judicial, decision-making body that has exclusive jurisdiction and absolute discretion to grant, deny, cancel, terminate or revoke parole. The Board's mission is to contribute to the protection of society by facilitating the timely reintegration of offenders as law-abiding citizens. The Board also makes conditional release decisions for offenders in provincial institutions for provinces without their own parole board. www.npb-cnrc.gc.ca
- The Canada Firearms Centre (CAFC) administers the Canada Firearms Program, which licenses and registers all firearms across Canada in support of the Government's crime prevention and broader law enforcement priorities. www.cfc-ccaf.gc.ca
- The Canada Border Services Agency (CBSA) manages the nation's borders by administering and enforcing approximately 75 domestic laws that govern trade and travel as well as international agreements and conventions. CBSA brings together all the major players involved in facilitating legitimate cross-border traffic and supporting economic development while stopping people and goods that pose a potential threat to Canada. CBSA processes commercial goods, travellers and conveyances, conducts secondary inspections of food and agricultural products imported by travellers at airports, conducts intelligence, engages in enforcement activities, supports free trade negotiations and conducts compliance audit reviews and dumping and subsidy investigations. www.cbsa-asfc.gc.ca

(b) Departmental Overview

Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness Canada (PSEPC) builds on existing strengths and creates new synergies. It brings together the former Department of the Solicitor General, the former Office of Critical Infrastructure Protection and Emergency Preparedness and the former National Crime Prevention Centre.

PSEPC provides advice to the Minister of Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness on policy and operational issues across the criminal justice, public safety and emergency management sectors and within the Portfolio. An integrated, cohesive approach solidifies horizontal collaboration across the Portfolio and ensures that timely, responsive advice is provided to the Minister. This approach further ensures that a strategic policy and legislative framework is maintained and that threats to Canadian security are assessed thoroughly and addressed with measured, thoughtful action commensurate with the threat level.

In addition, PSEPC delivers a range of programs designed to promote community safety, improve our collective capacity to handle emergencies, provide disaster assistance relief, better protect our critical infrastructure and increase our science and technology capacity. These programs are building safer, more resilient communities through partnerships.

PSEPC is also the home to the Government Operations Centre, which brings together key players from across the federal government to provide stable, around-the-clock coordination and support in the event of national emergencies.

To each of these ends, the Department advises, supports and assists the Minister in all of her responsibilities as they relate to:

- exercising her function as the lead Cabinet Minister for public safety;
- providing effective direction to the Portfolio Agencies;
- administering the National Crime Prevention Strategy in order to focus on the root causes of crime and enable communities to develop local solutions to crime and victimization;
- implementing the First Nations Policing Policy through the negotiation, administration, maintenance and monitoring of tripartite policing agreements with provincial, territorial and First Nations governments;
- leading the Integrated Justice Information initiative to facilitate the sharing of information across criminal justice agencies in Canada; and
- administering critical infrastructure protection and emergency management programs and services to enhance national capabilities in the event of a public safety emergency.

Section IV: Delivering on our Mandate

PSEPC headquarters is located in Ottawa, Ontario, while PSEPC regional offices are located across the country. Our regional offices deliver front-line services in crime prevention, emergency preparedness and Aboriginal policing.

PSEPC operations are funded through annual appropriations for operating expenditures as well as grants and contributions. Operating expenditures are targeted in direct support of the Department's policy advisory and operational roles while grants and contributions support the Department's public safety role by leveraging ongoing community participation in the criminal justice system, third party policy input, innovative research and evaluation and community mobilization strategies. The Department's policy advisory role mirrors the operational areas of the Portfolio Agencies and is therefore comprehensive in its scope of public safety issues and independent in its advice to the Minister. PSEPC's operational role directly supports its administration of the National Crime Prevention Strategy and the administration of emergency management and critical infrastructure protection programs and services, including the recently announced Government Operations Centre.

Grants and contributions administered by PSEPC are currently divided into twelve funding programs. (Note that programs 2-6 below compose the core funding elements of the National Crime Prevention Strategy.)

1. The First Nations Policing Policy (FNPP) negotiates, implements, administers and monitors tripartite agreements for First Nations policing services. The First Nations policing services are culturally appropriate and responsive to the particular needs of First Nations and Inuit communities and are cost-shared 52% by Canada and 48% by the province/territory.
2. The Business Action Program on Crime Prevention (BAPCP) invites the private sector to become an active partner, leader and resource in crime prevention. BAPCP supports the involvement of businesses and professional associations in corporate/community partnership projects to prevent crime.
3. The Community Mobilization Program (CMP) helps communities develop and implement grassroots strategies to prevent crime and victimization by addressing their root causes at the local level. Examples of root causes include substance abuse, inappropriate peer association, poor academic achievement and lack of training or employment.
4. The Crime Prevention Investment Fund (CPIF) identifies "what works, what doesn't and why" in crime prevention. CPIF supports selected Canada-wide demonstration projects and encourages the sharing of information about crime prevention initiatives across Canada.

5. The Crime Prevention Partnership Program (CPPP) supports the involvement of non-governmental organizations that can contribute to community crime prevention through the development of information, tools and resources. Results are applied across the country and are intended to facilitate community participation in all phases of crime prevention.
6. The Crime Prevention Strategic Fund (CPSF) supports projects that demonstrate the movement from independent and sometimes isolated crime prevention projects to more strategic, broad strategies that will contribute to knowledge and action on sustainable crime prevention through social development.
7. The Joint Emergency Preparedness Program (JEPP) was established to enhance the national capability to manage all types of emergencies and ensure a reasonably uniform emergency response and recovery capacity across Canada. National capabilities are enhanced through training activities, the purchase of emergency response equipment and joint emergency planning.
8. Disaster Financial Assistance Arrangements (DFAA) assist provinces and territories to offset the costs of response and of returning infrastructure and personal property to pre-disaster condition.
9. The Joint Infrastructure Interdependencies Research Program (JIIRP) is jointly funded with the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council (NSERC). The ultimate outcome of the JIIRP is to produce new science-based knowledge and practices to better assess, manage and mitigate risks to Canadians from critical infrastructure interdependencies by funding innovative research projects with an emphasis on cross-disciplinary research.
10. The Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness Canada Research Fellowship Program in Honour of Stuart Nesbitt White seeks to encourage Ph.D. research in two key areas:
  - a) Cyber security relating to critical infrastructure protection, preferably in disciplines such as computer/software/electrical/mechanical engineering, computer science, and/or areas such as systems science, and risk modeling and management.
  - b) Disaster and emergency management, and physical critical infrastructure studies, preferably in disciplines such as urban and regional planning, geography, sociology, economics, engineering, environmental sciences, and/or areas such as risk assessment and modeling.
11. The Departmental Contributions Program supports policy development through allocations to public not-for-profit organizations in support of PSEPC priorities under the following categories:
  - a) communication / information exchange projects;
  - b) projects to test innovative approaches for improved and more cost effective program delivery or projects that support cross-sectoral and inter-jurisdictional policy and legislative initiatives;
  - c) research and evaluation projects in support of public policy issues.

12. The Sustaining Funding Program (SFP) for National Voluntary Organizations (NVOs) provides grants to fourteen NVOs in order to cover core operating expenses and to maintain a national structure. These organizations work with the department and portfolio agencies through the provision of policy advice, public education activities and community participation in public safety initiatives.

Section V: The Planning Environment

Canadians enjoy a peaceful and safe society, underpinned by security and freedom – the cornerstones of our open, democratic and diverse society. However, in the post-9/11 world, the complexity of safety and security challenges facing Canada has rarely been greater – be it the integrity of our borders, the emergence of new infectious diseases or the interdependence of the electrical grid and other critical infrastructures. Moreover, terrorism, cyber crime, money laundering and the trafficking of drugs, humans and firearms are daunting in their scope and sophistication.

Canadians rightly expect their Government to have a plan of action for dealing with these challenges and to judiciously allocate resources in order to maximize the outcomes of strategically chosen priorities and efficiently executed activities. Many of these priorities have been laid out for us within the last year. First and foremost, with the creation of PSEPC, the Government of Canada has sent a clear signal that it attaches priority to public safety in Canada.

Since the federal Government reorganized in December 2003, PSEPC has been in transition. And although additional refinements may be necessary over the course of the next three years, the essential structures to tackle head-on the key challenges in national security, crisis and emergency management, policing and law enforcement, crime prevention, corrections and conditional release are now in place. Therefore, the priorities outlined in the following pages are not strictly “new priorities”, nor are they “business as usual”. Instead, the priorities identified reflect both a continuation of what has worked in public safety in the past and a clear recognition that some changes needed to be made to better integrate approaches and deliver more efficiently on the results intended.

As we move forward, our priorities and planning cycle continues to be informed by and adapted to key developments within the Government and within the broader public sphere, both domestically and internationally. For example, the recent introduction of Canada’s first integrated National Security Policy will focus our priorities and activities in the security sector for the near and long terms on three key areas:

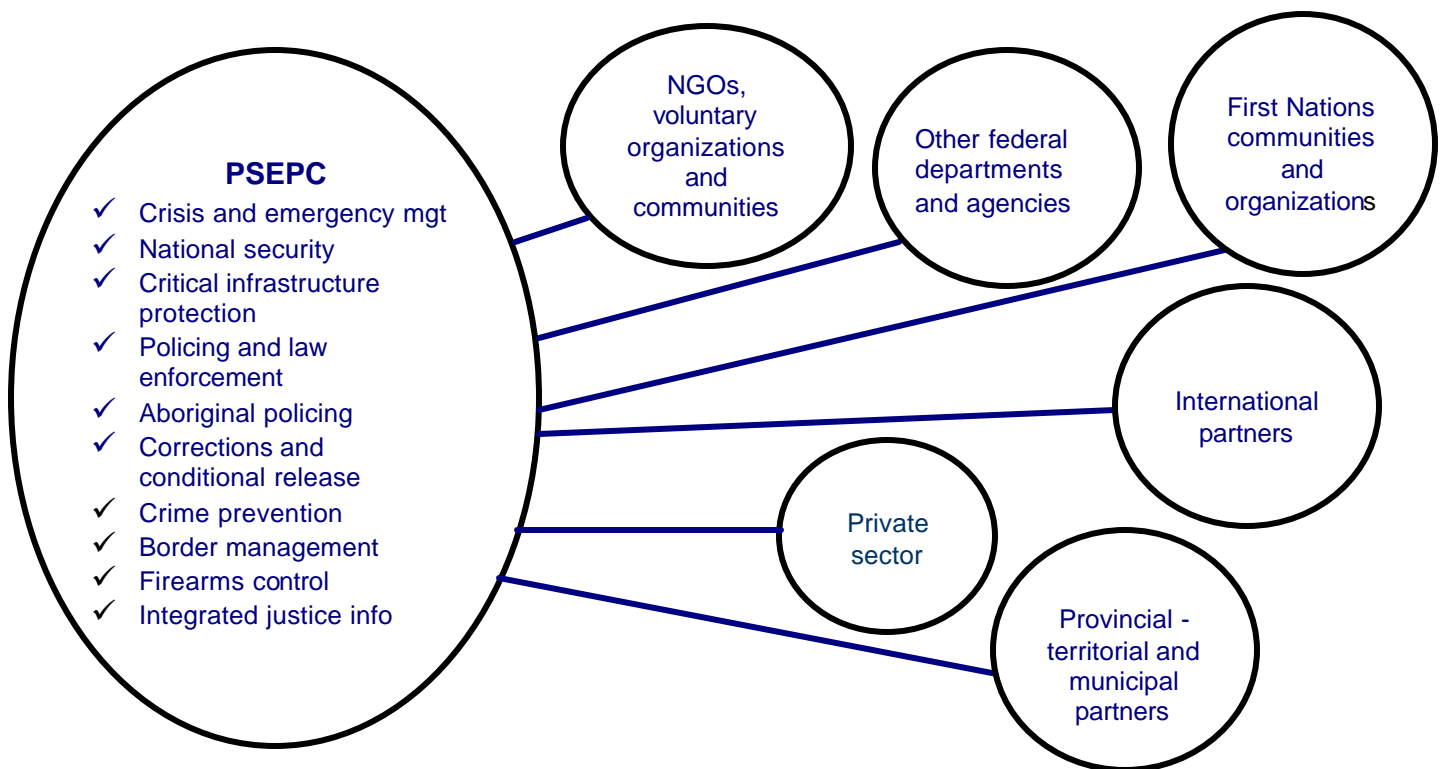

- 1) protecting Canada and Canadians at home and abroad;
- 2) ensuring Canada is not a base for threats to our allies; and
- 3) contributing to international security.

In addition, the March 2004 report of the Auditor General of Canada to Parliament included a chapter on national security that will also assist us in actively adapting our coordination functions and policy leadership priorities. The work of other actors including, for example, Parliamentary committees will also play a key role in contributing to our continual planning and prioritization process. However, as we align and realign public safety and security priorities, utmost attention will be paid to balancing those priorities with the imperatives of maintaining an open, democratic and free society – the cornerstone of Canadian life.

Ensuring safer, more resilient communities and thoughtful, measured responses to crime, emergencies and disaster relief requires partnership and collaboration. Crosscutting issues of public safety are more effectively dealt with when they are approached as shared objectives, and resources are jointly invested in a common pursuit. Therefore, while partnership comes in many forms (the participation of police services in crime prevention activities, for instance, and the coordination of emergency management measures with private sector organizations) outreach to our stakeholders will be key.

The creation of PSEPC highlighted the requirement to integrate resources and approaches to public safety internal to government. It is now time to re-focus and re-double our efforts on building up the many existing solid external linkages locally, regionally, nationally and internationally over the next three years as we build on our plans and priorities. This is why it is important to clearly state that the expected results outlined in this three-year plan are shared, collective results that cannot be achieved without key partnerships at the federal, provincial/territorial, municipal and international levels as well as with the private and voluntary sectors.

The consolidation of national security and emergency management functions previously exercised by the former Department of the Solicitor General and the Department of National Defence (Office of Critical Infrastructure Protection and Emergency Preparedness) enables us to move forward with a cohesive approach to operational readiness and response, policy and program coordination, critical infrastructure/emergency management programming and preparedness.

The Department's responsibility for implementation of the new National Security Policy, in concert with other key players, particularly the National Security Advisor, and other departments/agencies with public safety functions, provides a critical framework for ensuring the ongoing development and adjustment of seamless national security and emergency management measures.

Major programs and initiatives for which the Department holds key responsibility include:

- National Emergency Response System (NERS) – Canada's comprehensive and integrated system for providing a harmonized federal, provincial and territorial response to all types of emergencies.
- Government Operations Centre (GOC) – The Government of Canada Operations Centre provides around-the-clock incident monitoring, coordination, management and support across government to key national players in the event of a national emergency.
- National Counter-Terrorism Plan (NCTP) – Canada's primary mechanism for providing a coordinated policy and operational response to a domestic terrorist incident.
- Operational Readiness Program – training activities such as exercises, seminars and workshops designed to promote awareness of the national counter-terrorism arrangements among first responders, provincial and federal officers.
- Counter-Terrorism Consequence Management Arrangements – including possible participation in Exercise TOPOFF3, a joint Canada/United States counter-terrorism exercise that honours our commitment to the Smart Border Declaration and the Canada-U.S. Chemical, Biological, Radiological and Nuclear (CBRN) Guidelines.
- The Lawful Access Initiative – a comprehensive review of legislation to ensure that national security and law enforcement agencies maintain lawful access methods in the detection, prevention and investigation of terrorism and organized crime in the face of new and emerging technologies.

SEAMLESS EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT AND NATIONAL SECURITY MEASURES

- Joint Emergency Preparedness Program – a cost-shared program to build a more robust, national capacity among Canadian first responders to deal with all hazards.
- Disaster Financial Assistance Arrangements – provided to provinces and territories to help respond to and recover from major disasters when the provincial and territorial capacity is overwhelmed.
- Chemical, Biological, Radiological, Nuclear (CBRN) training – providing high calibre, standardized training to First Responders across Canada to develop an interoperable and robust capacity to deal with CBRN incidents.
- National Critical Infrastructure Assurance Program – builds a partnership with provinces and territories and critical infrastructure protection owners to provide greater resiliency to those services that are critical to the lives of all Canadians.
- Research and Development Program – builds knowledge of issues facing Canadians in critical infrastructure protection and emergency management and also provides tools to face the challenges.

Operational Priorities

- Coordinated policy and operational response to domestic terrorist incidents.
- Coordinated policy and strategic response to all types of emergencies.
- Review of legislative tools in heightened threat environment.
- Responsive emergency management programming.
- Integrated critical infrastructure and cyber protection security.

AN INTEGRATED PUBLIC SAFETY TOOLKIT

Planned spending ($000's) 2004-2005	Planned spending 2005-2006	Planned spending 2006-2007
$14,991.2 FTEs: 93	$14,841.2 FTEs: 92	$14,841.2 FTEs: 92

An integrated public safety toolkit requires not only the provision of the right resources in the right places and at the right time but also the integration of information among all those with a mandate to ensure public safety. This is why the Department's policy capacity on policing and law enforcement issues has been consolidated with its efforts to integrate critical criminal justice information across relevant jurisdictions and among key public safety and security agencies. This also enables the Minister to exercise national leadership on key common issues in policing and law enforcement.

Major programs or initiatives in which the Department holds responsibility include:

- The Integrated Justice Information (IJI) Initiative – initiated in 1999 in response to the Government of Canada's commitment to improve public safety and enhance Canadians confidence in the criminal justice system. IJI is advancing the delivery of the Canada Public Safety Information Network (CPSIN) to improve information sharing among criminal justice and law enforcement agencies in support of public safety and security. In addition, the Department is now mandated to develop a comprehensive vision and strategic design to address the integration of public safety information and interoperability between departments and agencies in Canada.
- National Agenda to Combat Organized Crime – coordinates information and strategies across jurisdictions in Canada, focussing on the key priorities of illicit drugs, outlaw motorcycle gangs, economic crime, high-tech crime, money laundering, trafficking in human beings and migrant smuggling, corruption and street gangs while also addressing the questions of intimidation in the justice system, illegal gaming, auto theft and organized crime activities in Canada's emerging diamond mining industry.
- The Canada-U.S. Cross Border Crime Forum – supports Canada-U.S. efforts to secure the border and facilitates several initiatives outlined under the Smart Border Declaration and its 32-Point Action Plan.

Operational Priorities

- Ongoing integration of critical criminal justice information across Canadian jurisdictions and organizations.
- Provision of research and policy expertise to key policing and law enforcement initiatives.

Partners

The integration of public safety tools and resources requires collaboration among many levels of government and across a broad range of key stakeholders. Canadians rightly expect their governments to work together on issues of public safety, to reach swift consensus on plans of action and to take the appropriate steps in laying out clear responsibilities and priorities. The Department works with key federal, provincial, territorial and municipal governments as well as non-governmental organizations on issues of policing, law enforcement and integrated justice information including:

Domestic

RCMP, CSIS, CBSA, CSC, NPB, CAFC, Foreign Affairs Canada, Justice Canada, Transport Canada, Health Canada, Citizenship and Immigration Canada, FINTRAC, Public Works and Government Services Canada, Canadian Centre for Justice Statistics, Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police, Canadian Professional Police Association and the Canadian Association of Police Boards.

International

The Department participates in and provides policy and research support to forums that advance partnership and coordination. For example: the G8 Lyon-Roma/Anti-Crime and Terrorism Group and its sub-groups on the issue of organized crime through the Canada-U.S. Cross-Border Crime Forum, the National Coordinating Committee on Organized Crime, and on money laundering through the Financial Action Task Force. The Department also chairs a number of these fora.

Other international partners include: U.S. Department of Homeland Security, U.S. Department of Justice, U.S. State Department, U.S. Office of National Drug Control Policy, Organization of American States, the G8, United Nations and the European Union.

Canada has made significant progress over the past ten years in its response to crime. The rate of incarceration has continued to decline over the years and the majority of conditional releases (day parole, full parole and statutory release) are successfully completed. Despite strong evidence that our corrections release system works well, improvements are planned to strengthen its effectiveness in contributing to the safety of Canadians and their communities.

To ensure a balanced and comprehensive approach to community safety, the Department has allied its policy and research capacity in corrections and criminal justice with its operation of the First Nations Policing Program and the National Crime Prevention Strategy. This approach maximizes the contributions of front-line community policing to reducing social disorder and fear of crime with the positive attributes of locally derived solutions to crime and victimization through social development. In this way, community safety is achieved through sustainable partnerships where systems of evaluation and knowledge dissemination are put in place to support continued advancement and collective well-being.

Major initiatives and programs in support of community safety through partnerships include:

- National Crime Prevention Strategy – aims to reduce crime and victimization through a "crime prevention through social development" approach, emphasizing the need to focus on those factors that put individuals at risk including family violence, drug abuse and school problems.
- First Nations Policing Policy – facilitates the negotiation and implementation of cost-shared funding arrangements through tripartite agreements between the federal and provincial/territorial governments and First Nations.
- Effective Corrections – aims to improve public safety by enhancing strategies to support the safe reintegration of offenders in the community including strategies focussed on Aboriginal offenders and their communities as well as innovative restorative justice approaches.

Operational Priorities

- Ongoing provision of evidence-based, research-supported correctional policies.
- Strong partnerships with Aboriginal peoples through enhanced governance capacity.
- Providing communities with the tools, knowledge and support they need to address the root causes of crime at the local level.

Setting a new strategic direction in any organization is never an easy task. However, the creation of PSEPC presents a unique opportunity to align the strengths of several organizations into one cohesive whole. A unified federal Department of Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness requires strong strategic direction and a cohesive, service-oriented approach to corporate management. Both of these aims bring together into one common element the need for a strong structure that adds strategic value to the work of other departmental branches and coordinates in an appropriate and balanced way the policy linkages between the Department and the Portfolio Agencies. Effective and efficient portfolio leadership is a critical function within a large and diverse range of public policy spheres. From corrections and criminal justice to policing and law enforcement, national security and emergency preparedness to border control and crime prevention, a portfolio of this size and scope needs cohesion brought to bear in its aims, its voice and its activities.

Operational Priorities

- The setting of a unified strategic direction for PSEPC.
- Timely and responsive support to the Minister, Deputy Minister and senior management.

To achieve an effective and efficient Portfolio management relationship, the Department will work closely with the Portfolio Agencies and Central Agencies (Privy Council Office, Finance Canada, Treasury Board Secretariat) in an effort to balance the necessities of policy coordination and operational independence. The Department will also work closely with Central Agencies in order to implement a Management Accountability Framework that effectively incorporates the principal elements of modern comptrollership, human resource modernization and Government On-Line.

Details on Transfer Payment Programs

Transfer Payments for the National Crime Prevention Strategy (NCPS)

The Safer Communities Initiative, which is the programming component of the NCPS, is made up of four grant and contribution programs. These programs work together to develop tools and resources, expand Canadians' knowledge about crime prevention, and encourage community and private sector participation in crime prevention. Funding is provided to national not-for-profit organizations, community groups and academics for approved proposals on crime prevention initiatives.

Objective

The NCPS has four key objectives:

- to promote partnerships between governments, businesses, community groups, and individuals to reduce crime and victimization;
- to assist communities in developing and implementing community-based solutions to local problems that contribute to crime and victimization;
- to increase public awareness of, and support for, crime prevention; and
- to conduct research on crime prevention and establish best practices.

Planned Results

- Focussed funding through the NCPS based on knowledge and evidence of gaps in specific focus areas.
- Report on findings of both internal and external information and research.
- Formation of local coalitions and partnerships to coordinate and stimulate local solutions.

Milestones

The NCPS has engaged in a number of evaluation exercises and the results have been very encouraging. For example, a Partnership Study (2002) indicated that the NCPS is having considerable success in attracting partnerships with organizations that did not traditionally consider crime prevention as part of their mandate and the majority (94%) would pursue partnerships of this nature in the future.

During 2003-04, NCPS supported over 200 projects, representing an investment of $7 million. Police from all levels were a key partner and funding was complimented by contributions from other sources including different levels of government, private foundations and private sector companies. For every dollar that NCPS invests in a project, between $1.50 - $9.00 is leveraged by project partners.

In addition to the focus on increasing partnerships and collaboration, there has been on-going effort to monitor progress and disseminate results on crime prevention. The GCIMS database has been developed to track project reporting for Grant and Contribution information management and the "Results-Based Management Accountability Framework" is being updated.

In terms of disseminating results on crime prevention, reports have been prepared that articulate the lessons learned about what works and what does not work in crime prevention, "fact sheet" templates along with other communications instruments are being prepared for dissemination to communities and other partners and stakeholders.

Transfer Payments for the Disaster Financial Assistance Arrangements (DFAA) Program

Objective

To provide financial assistance to provincial and territorial governments in cases where the basic costs of resource and recovery would be greater than they could reasonably be expected to bear.

Planned Results

To help restore provincial/territorial works to their pre-disaster condition and to facilitate the restoration of basic, essential, personal property of private citizens, farmsteads and small businesses.

Milestones

Audited expenses are reimbursed as expeditiously as possible in accordance with established guidelines for the administration of Disaster Financial Assistance Arrangements.

Transfer Payments for the Joint Emergency Preparedness Program (JEPP)

Objective

Support cooperation among the federal and provincial/territorial governments in working toward an enhanced national capacity to meet emergencies of all types.

Planned Results

Approve projects in all provinces and territories to ensure a reasonably uniform emergency response capability across the country.

Milestones

Projects for the new fiscal year are considered and evaluated as expeditiously as possible, with provinces and territories advised of all decisions rendered by the beginning of each fiscal year (April 1).

Transfer Payments for the First Nations Policing Program

Payments to the provinces, territories, municipalities, Indian band councils and recognized authorities representing Indians on-reserve, Indian communities on Crown land and Inuit communities for the First Nations Policing Program

Objective

To contribute to the improvement of social order, public security and personal safety in First Nations and Inuit communities through the implementation of the First Nations Policing Policy.

Planned Results

- Enhanced governance and accountability in First Nations police services and police governing authorities.
- Tripartite policing agreements with First Nations communities.
- Innovative approaches in First Nations policing strategies in the areas of crime prevention, domestic/family violence and youth crime.

Milestones

The Department continues to develop appropriate systems to monitor the First Nations Policing Program. These include working with First Nations communities and Police Services to develop and improve governance and accountability through leadership and training initiatives; undertaking various research initiatives to support an evaluation of FNPP (e.g., community satisfaction surveys); developing a comprehensive set of performance indicators that can be used to measure First Nations police effectiveness over the longer term; and implementing data collection in accordance with the recently developed FNPP "Results-based Management Accountability Framework".

The Department will also continue to utilize the departmental audit and evaluation functions to monitor the program on an on-going basis.

Legislation Administered by the Department and Portfolio Agencies

It is important to note that with the reorganization of the Government on December 12, 2003, several of the duties, functions and responsibilities of the Minister and the legislation administered by the new Department and its Agencies are the subject of Orders in Council issued under the Public Service Rearrangement and Transfer of Duties Act.

It is also important to note that with the reorganization of the Government, the Solicitor General, by virtue of an Order in Council, may now be referred to as the “Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness” for administrative purposes. However, when dealing with anything that has legal force such as the signing of a legal document or the exercise of a statutory function or responsibility, the Minister must still be referred to as the “Solicitor General of Canada”. To avoid confusion, when exercising a legal function, the Minister may do so as the “Solicitor General of Canada (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness)”.
