IMPORTANT ACQUISITIONS, INSIGHTFUL EXHIBITIONS, OUTSTANDING SCHOLARSHIP: THESE ARE ATTRIBUTES OF THE WORLD'S FINEST GALLERIES. YET THEY REPRESENT ONLY PART OF WHAT MAKES AN ART GALLERY SUCCESSFUL. THE OTHER EQUALLY CRITICAL COMPONENT IS PEOPLE – VISITORS OF ALL AGES AND FROM ALL SECTORS OF SOCIETY, ENJOYING THE GALLERY AND ITS PROGRAMS, PARTICIPATING IN ACTIVITIES, LEARNING ABOUT ART AND ARTISTS.

OVER THE COURSE OF ITS HISTORY, THE NATIONAL GALLERY OF CANADA HAS CONSISTENTLY MET AND OFTEN EXCEEDED ITS MANDATED OBJECTIVES AND HIGH SCHOLARLY STANDARDS. THIS PAST FISCAL YEAR, WHILE MAINTAINING A STRONG COMMITMENT TO COLLECTIONS AND RESEARCH, THE GALLERY FOCUSED ON PEOPLE AND MADE A CONCERTED EFFORT TO REACH OUT TO A BROADER PUBLIC, INVITING A DIVERSITY OF AUDIENCES TO BECOME INVOLVED. FROM CREATING A WELCOMING, FAMILY-FRIENDLY ATMOSPHERE TO GROWING THE MEMBERSHIP BASE, FROM SENDING WORKS OF ART ON TOUR TO CONCEPTUALIZING A VIRTUAL GALLERY, THE NATIONAL GALLERY HAS BROUGHT GREAT ART TO CANADIANS AND CANADIANS TO GREAT ART.

OBJECTIVELY FOCUSED

As work progressed over the past year, the National Gallery, which includes the affiliate Canadian Museum of Contemporary Photography (CMCP), concentrated on its objectives: to collect and research extraordinary works of art, to communicate with and educate the public so as to further their knowledge, understanding, and enjoyment of the visual arts, to accommodate the national collection of art in a secure yet accessible facility, and to administer Gallery resources responsibly and effectively.

This report details how the National Gallery met and surpassed these objectives during the fiscal year 1998–99, first documenting notable acquisitions and exhibitions, then presenting activities undertaken against the mandated objectives. The Highlights section captures noteworthy mentions in brief.

A Word from the Chairperson Board of Trustees

The publication of an annual report makes it possible to gauge the extent of the Gallery's activities in the fiscal year 1998–99 and to note that, just as in previous years, this past year was a very full one indeed. This is also an ideal opportunity to stress the fine quality of the work carried out by various staff teams who, through their concerted efforts on behalf of the Gallery and its mission, succeeded in maintaining the interest of a continuously growing art public by offering it an increasingly diversified range of services and activities.

It is appropriate here to point out the Gallery's very real progress in implementing the strategic objectives set by the Board of Trustees last year, whose aim was to make the Gallery's activities truly national in scope – a particularly important goal in such a vast country. The Gallery must not only seek constantly to extend its activities in a way that will benefit the greatest possible number of people, but must also see to it that the best use is made of the resources available for visual art in Canada. Although there are many ways to achieve these aims, the most effective path lies in strengthening cooperative links with other Canadian institutions working in the same areas and with the same mandates.

The Gallery has moved towards attaining these strategic objectives by creating a Department of National Outreach and International Relations. Some promising approaches directed at several Canadian museums are already showing positive signs, particularly in the form of partnership and cooperation agreements with like-minded institutions interested in sharing their resources in order to increase their effectiveness.

Almost at the same time, and from a similar perspective, the Gallery redefined the mandate of Public Affairs in order to ensure that information on the Gallery's activities reaches a wider audience. In addition to this prime responsibility, Public Affairs will also function as the eyes and ears of the institution and will help it gain a better knowledge and understanding of its clients' needs and opinions.

Finally, the past year saw considerable progress on the project to set up a Foundation. Over the next few months, the Gallery will officially announce the birth of the Foundation, which will work toward establishing an endowment fund administered by the Board and will assist those activities the Gallery sees fit to support. This will involve steps to be taken within the context of the Gallery's mission, especially in relation to the strategic objectives outlined above.

In closing, on behalf of the Board of Trustees I would like to thank the management and staff of the Gallery. The institution relies heavily on their expertise, diligence, and dedication in accomplishing its objectives in accordance with established priorities, and in fulfilling its mandate. I would also like to mention the dedication of my colleagues on the Board, as well as their constant support of the Gallery's mission and of the management and staff who make that mission possible.

Message from the Director

In a way that is in keeping with previous major achievements, the year 1998–99 was marked by several events that attest to the vitality and innovative spirit of the National Gallery of Canada and its affiliate, the Canadian Museum of Contemporary Photography (CMCP). The year also reflects the proud dynamism of the entire team and the Board of Trustees.

We have made some magnificent acquisitions that have considerably added to all segments of the national collection, to the greater benefit of our visitors and all Canadians. We are particularly grateful to our donors, who, once again, were most generous. We also have not forgotten all those who helped facilitate the operations of the Gallery and its purchases of works through the participation of the Government of Canada and its Department of Canadian Heritage.

The past year was also remarkable for the richness and diversity of its exhibitions programming. Whether large or small, the exhibitions of the National Gallery and CMCP touched the hearts and minds of Ottawa visitors. But they also had a much wider impact, thanks to travelling shows and the lending of works to other museums and galleries in Canada and abroad. We are particularly proud of this segment of our activities. In addition, fine educational and cultural programs and innovative communications activities did much to expand and facilitate access to our collection and exhibitions.

In 1998 we celebrated the tenth anniversary of the opening of our splendid building, one of the jewels of the national capital. Although designed by the immensely talented Canadian architect Moshe Safdie, its construction owes much to the activities of three key people to whom we would now like to pay tribute. Jean Sutherland Boggs, Director of the Gallery from 1966 to 1976, embarked upon the planning for the building during that period. Beginning in 1982, she directed the Canadian Museums Construction Corporation, which oversaw the construction of the National Gallery and the Museum of Civilization in Hull (designed by the Canadian architect Douglas Cardinal). Joseph Martin, Director of the Gallery from 1983 to 1987, devoted considerable energy to getting the construction project back on track after a hiatus of several years. Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau made the enlightened decision to obtain a commitment from the federal government to build a showcase worthy of our national collections, which has since become a source of pride for everyone.

The inauguration of the building on 21 May 1988 was a time of rejoicing and occurred a few months before the establishment of the Gallery as a corporation by the Museums Act, which was passed on 30 January to come into effect the following 1 July.

This institution, which is a pleasure to lead, owes its vitality to the personnel who run it on a day-to-day basis with unswerving devotion to the public. Several newcomers have joined our team, and we would like to point out the arrival of three who have come to head new departments. Marie Claire Morin, Director, Development Department, took up her post on 14 April 1998. On 8 September we welcomed Karen Spierkel, Director of Public Affairs, and Mayo Graham, Director of National Outreach and International Relations. They have brought with them a dynamic and innovative approach that we wish to encourage in all our areas of activity. Ms. Morin also occupies another important position, that of President and CEO of the National Gallery of Canada Foundation. The Foundation, which was launched in June 1999, is a completely independent body devoted to securing financial support for the Gallery.

Finally, we would like to thank the members of the Board of Trustees for their complete devotion to the institution and for their unwavering support for management and all staff. This is also a fitting opportunity to pay tribute to our numerous sponsors, who provide increasingly indispensable financial and media support. We wish to fulfil our mandate by working very closely with the Board of Trustees, our staff, and all our other partners in order to improve and make more accessible an institution that belongs to you, the public.

The wealth of a country cannot be measured solely by the material comforts its citizens enjoy; an analysis of this kind must also take into consideration its cultural and national heritage. As a national institution, we are proud to play our part in this ongoing process.

Tony Cragg is one of the leading figures among a generation of British sculptors who emerged on the international scene in the late 1970s. Unlike their predecessors Henry Moore or Anthony Caro, these younger sculptors did not find their inspiration in nature and traditional materials, but in the urban environment and manufactured objects. In addition, Cragg's interest in science, in particular the way that scientific discoveries have extended the boundaries of the natural world – opening invisible realms to knowledge – and in the blurred distinctions between the natural and the artificial, has nourished his promethean imagination.

A Place in My Heart is typical of the formally inventive sculptures that characterize Cragg's recent work. The title carries both a reference to feeling – (you will always have) a place in my heart – and to the physical structure of the heart. With its prompting, we may see in the bulging and hollowed shapes of the work a suggestion of the muscular chambers and ventricles of the heart. Yet the sculpture does not literally represent anything. Rather, it is a good example of Cragg's ability to analyze, deconstruct, and recombine the forms of things existing in the world to make new and unfamiliar objects that tease us with their resemblance to things we know. The skin of dice that clads the forms knits them together visually, while taking us metaphorically from the inner world of the body in which function dominates to the world of everyday experience where chance and the aleatory have equal importance. The incongruity of such juxtapositions has led some to see Cragg as a latter-day surrealist, but it seems unlikely that the dogma of that movement is of any particular interest to him, given his preoccupation with scientific knowledge. More likely it was the incongruity of scale and form between the small, regular shape of the dice and the organic volumes they mask that pleased him. The camouflaging textural dazzle of the dice when massed together contributes significantly to the arresting visual impact of the sculptural pair.

Cragg has used the metaphor of the landscape to describe his work: "People say there's a great deal of variety in my work, but I'm not so sure that's true. . . . It's like making a complete landscape with all the parts in it: there's the urban world, architecture and so on, there's the organic world, there's the atmosphere, and there's the geological structure."¹ A Place in My Heart alludes to the organic world, evoking the sensate world of the body with unexpected wit. Its acquisition enables the National Gallery to demonstrate the evolution of Cragg's work from an earlier preoccupation with creating three-dimensional images of everyday life assembled from objects scavenged in the urban landscape, as seen in the work Red S (1983) already in the collection, to inventive allusions to the body and the invisible processes that sustain life. Its visual eloquence makes it a significant addition to the contemporary art collection.

Betty Goodwin is particularly known and respected for her drawing, but she has frequently turned to sculpture when she has felt the need for its special gravity and material qualities. And the association of sculpture with the art of the memorial, in response to the need for a permanent marker of humankind's fugitive presence on earth, makes it a fitting choice for Goodwin, whose art so often evokes the pain of memory and the passage of time. Although her sculptures have most often taken the form of altar-like tablets or reliquaries, Before Silence is a rare example in Goodwin's oeuvre of a fully figurative sculpture.

A life-size bronze of a truncated foot held by two hands at the ankle, the work is related to several drawings and a sculpture made a year or two earlier in which the theme of restraint and arrest was rendered through figures climbing ladders while others attempt to hold them back. Of this series, an untitled sculpture in beeswax and steel is the closest precursor of Before Silence, both in theme and in the eloquent economy of its rendering. There, Goodwin presented a lean, elongated arm clutching the rung of a ladder tightly while the hand of another figure grips it from below. The tension of the gesture is reinforced by its ambiguity: is the hand grasping for help or is it trying to pull the other down? The theme of restraint is treated in a similarly equivocal way in Before Silence. The hands holding the ankle are as evocative of steadying and guidance as they are of restraint and clinging.

This ambiguity, combined with the apparent equilibrium of the forces represented by the firm hands and the static foot, which may only be that of an elusive and fleeting moment between the movements of violent constraint or desperate clinging, is typical of Goodwin's work. The equilibrium of the gesture in here is all the more poignant in the context of the destabilization that figures so prominently in Goodwin's ceaseless probing into the human condition through her art. What her work captures so powerfully is the elusive moment of potential transition in which things may turn, unawares, from the safe into the perilous, from the benign into the malignant. It is a delicate moment of heightened tension in which the yearning for anchorage in a centreless universe seems delusive, if not wholly futile. Emerging from this universe, Before Silence speaks of an embeddedness in the tangled web of ambivalences that is the very substance of interior life.

The National Gallery owns a wide range of Goodwin's work, including an important sculpture, Untitled (1978), and the more recent Sargasso Sea (1992). Before Silence, a unique bronze work that allegorizes the body with compelling art and deep-seated humanism, is a singular addition to these pieces. It attests to the complex inquiry into human struggle and vulnerability by a mature artist whose work has not ceased to be deeply moving.

Since 1985, Holly King has produced several cycles of work that explore various approaches to landscape. They are astonishing in their variety, and beguiling in their beauty and strength. Yet King restricts herself to one territory: that of the imagination, where what truly counts is the gaze brought to bear upon things and the feelings to which they give rise.

King's method has remained the same from the outset: she builds, then photographs, deceptively simple models whose components feature different types of landscape. When enlarged, these light-bathed miniatures become grandiose scenes. Her photography borrows elements from painting, sculpture, and drawing – as well as objects both fabricated and natural – and integrates them into pictures with multiple resonances. By enlarging the images (following the example of landscape painting), King takes advantage of photography's capacity to transform humble objects, in the process revealing wholly surprising aspects of these materials and composing surprisingly realistic scenes where nature and artifice coexist.

Whether it is the dreamlike spaces inspired by mythology (1985–89), The Gardens cycle (1990–92) with its human scale and imagery, the moods projected in Imprisoned in the Viewless Winds (1995), or the vaguely defined territories of The Forest of Enchantment (1997), each of King's suites works through variations on a theme. CMCP has built up a significant body of work by drawing on each of these projects. As a result, each phase of the artist's output is represented by several defining works that bring out the richness of each cycle and of the narrative strategies employed.

The Veiled Forest is one of King's most recent works. In these photographs, the gaze focuses on the centre of things and circumscribes an eminently photographic space where the depth of field cuts up the image into undefined or sharply delineated zones. This produces an ambiguous space that simultaneously reveals and conceals itself, and where the gaze is constantly coming up against veils that stand between it and the colours of a mysterious forest that is at once unsettling and alluring.

With subversive humour, the Korean-Canadian artist Sasha Yungju Lee examines mass media images, gender identity, and racial erasure. EYE-CON, her 1997 series of computer-assisted prints, confronts normative Hollywood beauty. Presented in billboard or cinematic proportions, each print features a lavishly hand-tinted publicity still of a celebrated actress or Hollywood “icon,” ranging from Elizabeth Taylor and Doris Day to Courtney Love and Raquel Welch. Each adopts a pose appropriate to her particular screen persona – whether homespun, coquettish, or overtly eroticized. Lee draws attention to the ethnocentrism of archetypal Hollywood beauty by digitally substituting her own eyes for those of the stars. In effect, she transforms this cast of Hollywood goddesses into a biracial pantheon, underscoring the message of normalized racial hierarchies by ironically pairing each image with a statement on cosmetic surgery or racial stereotyping.

EYE-CON emerged not only from Lee’s ongoing concern about the lack of Asian representation in North American mass media, but as a personal response to the growing number of young Korean women undergoing cosmetic eye surgery in order to appear Caucasian. By performing what she aptly terms “digital surgery” on these icons of Hollywood beauty, Lee reverses the trend.

The recent acquisition of Portrait of a Man with a Felt Hat by Lorenzo Lotto makes a splendid addition to the collection. Lotto is today recognized as one of the great masters of the Italian Cinquecento, whose training was Venetian but much of whose work was conducted in the Veneto, in and around Bergamo, and in the Marches. His early work bears the stamp of Bellini and Giorgione and, to a lesser degree, he was influenced by Raphael, whom he would have met during a brief trip to Rome, and by Leonardo. Primarily a painter of religious pictures, Lotto had a sensitive, even introspective nature. He was closely allied with the Dominican Order, painting altarpieces for a number of its institutions in northern Italy, and he died a lay brother of that order in Loreto. He was also a portrait painter of exceptional gifts who had patrons in Venice, Bergamo, and the Marches.

Hailed by critics, this rediscovered portrait was included in the 1997–98 Lotto retrospective that took place in Washington, Bergamo, and Paris. Unusual for the fact that it was painted on paper, later mounted on board and, more recently, canvas, it possibly connects with Lotto's accounts for 4 March 1541, when a group of eight heads painted in oil on paper was recorded as having been purchased by Ottavio da Macerata. Lotto was obliged to spend several months in Macerata the previous year awaiting payment for the altarpiece he had executed in 1539 for the Dominican church in nearby Cingoli. It is logical to assume that the artist may have used this time to paint portraits of local people in the absence of other commissions and, for lack of a proper studio, that he executed these on paper, taking them back to Venice for completion.

Lotto's sympathy for his subject is reflected in the straightforward, unassuming characterization. The sitter looks directly back at the artist and indeed the viewer with an open, intelligent expression. His head and shoulders fill the canvas in the manner of Raphael's famous portrait of Castiglione, which was then in Mantua. Though a great colourist, Lotto here plays with similarly monochromatic tonalities. Despite the restriction of colour, the picture is not dark, but exhibits subtle variations in the warm tones of the costume, as well as in the flesh and hair. The artist provides no clue to the identity of his sitter, but the garments, while simple, are neat, sober, and of a certain quality. Over the slight indication of a white linen shirt, brilliantly highlighted, the sitter wears a black jacket and a thick grey wool tunic topped by a suede vest trimmed with black velvet. In his left hand he holds a felt hat, which his slightly tousled hair suggests he has just removed, lending the portrait a sense of immediacy. The picture's small format is typical of portraits of the first half of the Cinquecento.

In forming the collections, curators endeavour to acquire works of the highest quality. They have the choice of seeking artists as yet not represented or of building on existing strengths as is the case here. Within the context of the National Gallery's collection, this portrait obviously complements Lotto's earlier, brightly coloured Virgin and Child with Saints Sebastian and Roch (c. 1521/24). It also reinforces an already strong collection of 16th-century portraiture of both the Italian and German schools, notably adding one in which the sensitive, compelling psychological analysis of the sitter contributes an element not otherwise represented.

David Milne

David Milne (Canadian, 1882-1953) Black and White Trees and Buildings 1915-16 Oil on canvas Gift of M. F. Feheley, Toronto, 1998
© The David Milne Estate, 1999

Born near Burgoyne, Ontario, David Milne arrived in New York in 1903, where he studied and worked as a commercial artist for a number of years. Around 1912 he began to achieve recognition as a painter for his New York street scenes. He exhibited five paintings in the famous 1913 Armory Show and in 1916 moved upstate to Boston Corners.

In his early New York paintings and watercolours such as Billboards (NGC), Milne constructed his composition in horizontal bands, restricted spatial recession, and used trees to define the principal verticals. The bright whites, reds, yellows, and blues of these works contrast with the more restrained palette of his 1915 paintings of the Bronx, New York, such as Grey, Brown and Black (NGC), in which houses are piled up in a frontal, vertical arrangement, the vertical lines juxtaposed with the curving foliage of the trees painted in solid darks with a somewhat lighter crest. He would pursue this latter convention in his sparse 1915 drawings of trees, their black cores and green crests sensitively arranged on the white blank paper.

In Black and White Trees and Buildings Milne has depicted two houses and a garage at the foot of a hill with three trees in the open foreground. As in the 1915 drawings he has restricted his palette to white and an almost black green with touches of brown and a somewhat lighter green in the buildings. The image is composed of contrasts between the white lower and black green upper sections and between the white and black green of the foreground trees. The left tree is outlined in black green and filled with white leaving the ground visible at the edges of the colour breaks. The right tree is painted in black green with white loosely defining the branches. Above is a smaller bisected tree, whose lower half is white outlined in black green and upper half black green outlined in white. White lines accent the curving branches of the large pines and hills above, only summarily defining the somewhat ambiguous forms. While the white in the foreground and on the curves of the branches suggests snow and thus an early 1916 date, Milne's use of colour was not mimetic but abstract, as evidenced in some of the titles he used during that period: Bronze and Black, Blue-Green, Black-Green. Black and White Trees and Buildings is not the artist's title, however, but one assigned to the painting in the recent catalogue raisonné prepared by David Milne Jr. and David Silcox and published by the University of Toronto Press.

The years 1915 and 1916 mark a transition in Milne's career. Certain earlier ideas are pushed further and new directions initiated. In his oils of 1916, painted in Boston Corners, he again set trees against a rising hill and further explored the bisected image by using horizontal and vertical lines. The artist was later quite diffident about the works from this period, calling them "mannered, heavy, spotty and lacking any sensitiveness or subtlety." He blamed their deficiencies on a confusion between his commercial graphic work and painting. It is difficult to understand how these comments might apply to this wonderfully restrained yet subtly painted canvas by one of Canada's most important artists of the first half of the 20th century.

Carved from hard, dark green stone, Owl with Fish in Beak combines observation from nature with a number of sculptural qualities that have become hallmarks of Osuitok Ipeelee's work – fine carving, attention to detail, and a remarkable sense of balance. With its bulging eyes, delicately incised feathers, and twisted legs, this seemingly top-heavy creation may appear to be a rather quirky stylization. Yet by accentuating features such as the forward-staring gaze, huge beak, and clutching claws, the artist remains true to the distinctive characteristics of the arctic owl. Visually dynamic and composed in such a way as to invite viewing from all sides, the work demonstrates the kind of imaginative complexity and compositional daring that Osuitok has often excelled at. One of Cape Dorset's best known artists, Osuitok has been a restless creator, working through, leaving, and returning to a number of themes and stylistic approaches throughout his career. Owl with Fish in Beak adds an early work to his representation in the National Gallery's collection and is a fine example of his ability to see the ordinary from a different point of view and to make stone do the impossible.

Jean-Paul Riopelle began his career in Montreal as a student of Paul-Émile Borduas and went on to become a founding member of the Automatistes. Following the initial recognition of this new group of artists at the 1946 exhibition of the Contemporary Art Society, Riopelle left for Paris, returning briefly in 1948 to Montreal, where he signed the Refus Global. During these early years he made Paris his home, and from there eventually succeeded in becoming one of Canada's most internationally acclaimed painters.

By 1953 Riopelle was well on the way to establishing himself in the forefront of France's evolving movement of Lyrical Abstraction. Represented by leading avant-garde Parisian dealers, he won the admiration of the respected critic Georges Duthuit, whose brother-in-law was Pierre Matisse. Matisse was one of New York's preeminent art dealers, and in 1953 he offered to act as Riopelle's American agent. Untitled was part of Riopelle's first exhibition at the Pierre Matisse Gallery in January 1954 along with several other coloured ink drawings and eighteen canvases, including Knight Watch (NGC) and Tocsin (NGC). The exhibition must have been spectacular, and it certainly established Riopelle as one of Canada's most important abstract expressionists.

Riopelle's work in coloured ink is probably the least appreciated aspect of his work and undeservedly so, particularly when confronted with a drawing of such monumental achievement and beauty as Untitled. It belongs to a series of coloured ink drawings inspired by Riopelle's admiration for Claude Monet, in particular, his waterlily paintings. It is not difficult to see Riopelle's emulation of Monet in this work. By spray painting on the colours, Riopelle captures the transparency and infinite depth of water as well as its shimmering surface. Applying india ink in daubs and dripping lines over the colours, he replicates the effect of waterlilies floating on the surface, their roots penetrating the liquid colour of the pond.

Untitled is a pivotal work in Riopelle's oeuvre. The application of black ink looks back to the Pollock-influenced action painting of 1950–52, in which drippings of paint were splattered and dribbled across the canvas. We can also see in the daubs of black ink the mosaic-like style of the 1952–53 paintings created by applying paint with a palette knife. In these paintings from the early fifties, we observe a dense layering of pigments that, by offering a uniform overall application of the colours, squeezes out light and air. The Monet-inspired coloured ink drawings of 1953 point to a new direction achieved by breaking down the mosaic patterning and decreasing the density of pigments. Air and light are allowed to enter the work – an effect that can be seen in paintings such as his masterpiece, Pavane (1954; NGC).

Garden of an Italian Villa, an unpublished and recently discovered work, is Hubert Robert's most ambitious and fully resolved landscape from his eleven-year sojourn in Rome. The son of a well-placed valet de chambre in the household of François-Joseph de Choiseul, Marquis de Stainville, Robert was given a classical education normally available only to sons of the nobility. Accompanying Choiseul's son to Rome in November 1754, Robert was recommended to Charles Natoire, the Director of the French Academy, and was offered lodgings at the Academy. After five years in Rome at the Duc de Choiseul's expense, Robert was made an official pensionnaire of the French Academy – an honour normally reserved for history painters alone.

During his long stay, Robert unceasingly made sketches and studies of the monuments, architecture, gardens, and inhabitants of Rome and the campagna, or surrounding countryside. With Jean-Honoré Fragonard, with whom he drew and sketched on several occasions, he created an entirely new and original type of "natural" landscape that broke with heroic and pastoral conventions. In their fluid handling, painterly surfaces, and rich, vibrant colouring, these works introduced an authentic visual response to natural surroundings and daily activities, hitherto lacking in the tradition of French landscape painting.

Garden of an Italian Villa is a summation of the lessons Robert learned in Italy, and was probably one of the last compositions of any scale that he painted before returning to Paris in July 1765. It is characteristic of his working method that the painting does not strictly conform to an identifiable garden or villa, but connections can be made with various buildings and gardens in and around Rome (particularly the Villa Borghese and Hadrian's Villa near Tivoli). We are, of course, far from the city's centre, and in his picturesque garden Robert has incorporated reminiscences from several celebrated villas.

The figures in the composition are particularly charming. An elegantly attired woman accompanied by an abbé climbs the monumental staircase that leads to the gardens of a grand Renaissance villa. She gestures towards the light that can be seen through the foliage. Dwarfed by the overhanging pine trees that arch to form a bower in the distance, the progress of the couple is monitored by a laundress at lower right, an elderly gentleman in a black tricorne hat, and a young boy at lower left. The swaying trees at the centre of the composition and the leaning cypresses at right suggest that a storm is about to break; the patch of blue sky visible above the villa's main building has already turned to grey in the dark clouds that hover above the agitated trees.

Hubert Robert was one of the most favoured artists of his generation, his assiduousness and devotion to his work commending him to the authorities. He thoroughly immersed himself in the monuments and sites of Rome and its countryside, and his paintings and watercolours, in which topographical elements are juxtaposed in fictitious – and often fantastical – ensembles, found immediate favour with the leading connoisseurs and collectors in Paris. We have yet to discover who first owned Garden of an Italian Villa, but it is one of the most developed and ambitious of a series of picturesque landscapes on which Robert was engaged during his last year in Rome.

Gift of Mr. and Mrs. Michal Hornstein, Montreal

The National Gallery of Canada recently received a generous gift from Renata and Michal Hornstein of a small, gemlike landscape by Rubens dating from his last years at his estate, Het Steen. In the foreground a stream meanders into the distance; beside it four trees are clustered on a bank and three cows graze. Seven more trees are set slightly farther back at the right, while, on the left, the eye is drawn to the distance over the rolling fields to a dramatic sky with sun emerging from behind stormy clouds. By gradual changes in light effects, Rubens here displays a full command of atmospheric perspective typical of Venetian painting of the early 16th century, examples of which he saw in Italy at Mantua and Rome, but which was also practised in contemporary Dutch landscape painting, equally familiar to the artist. A Stormy Landscape was first documented through an 18th-century engraving made after it by the Dutch artist J. Dansaert (or Danckerts) and was later part of the vast collection of Adolphe Schloss, comprising mainly northern pictures.

Perhaps the most famous of 17th-century artists, Rubens is remembered primarily as a figure painter. His dynamic, large-scale compositions of both religious and mythological subject matter were popular not only in Flanders where he spent most of his life, but were sought by foreign princes whom he met through the Brussels court of Archdukes Albert and Isabella, joint governors of Catholic Flanders. Throughout his career Rubens also painted landscapes, which were prized by such eminent collectors as the Dukes of Richelieu and Buckingham.

Trained in Antwerp, where he became a master painter of the Guild of St. Luke in 1598, Rubens's early landscapes conform to the Flemish tradition established by Joachim Patiner (c. 1485–1524) and Peter Bruegel (c. 1525–1569). He travelled to Italy in 1600, first to Mantua, then to Rome two years later, making contacts with other artists, studying the works of Renaissance masters, and enjoying a certain personal success. Following his return to Flanders, Rubens was kept fully occupied producing altarpieces for the churches in Antwerp and pictures for the court in Brussels. On diplomatic missions in Madrid and London, he renewed his acquaintance with the works of Titian by examining the important collections of Venetian paintings in both capitals. In 1630 Rubens, by then fifty-two and a widower for four years, married the young Hélène Fourment and five years later purchased Het Steen, situated between Malines and Brussels, where he spent his last years. The buildings included a tower from which it has been suggested he may have painted views of the extensive plain beyond it that characterize his late landscapes. These landscapes reflect a more personal expression, are often on a small scale and, increasingly, are devoid of figures (only the occasional animal is permitted to stray into his line of vision). The intimate character of these works is underlined by the fact that a number of them remained in the artist's possession, suggesting they were not made for sale.

While the National Gallery's collection of Flemish painting is strong in figurative works, comprising religious paintings by Rubens himself as well as the marvellous As the Old Sing, So the Young Pipe by Jacob Jordaens and van Dyck's Suffer Little Children to Come unto Me, landscape of this period is scarcely represented, making A Stormy Landscape a notable and appreciated contribution.

After an apprenticeship as a church decorator in Quebec, Suzor-Coté left for Paris in 1891 to continue his training. He entered the studio of Léon Bonnat at the École des beaux-arts and during the winter of 1893–94 studied with Fernand Cormon. After having exhibited for the first time with the Société des Artistes Français, almost a rite of passage for debutant artists, he returned to Canada in the spring of 1894. Over the next decade he travelled between Arthabaska – his hometown in the Eastern Townships – Montreal, and Paris, working in Paris from November 1897 to June 1901, January 1902 to June 1903, January 1904 to July 1907, and April 1911 to January 1912. The dates of Suzor-Coté’s sojourns in Paris are of interest here as the inscription on this undated still-life identifies it as having been painted in that city.

While principally a figure and landscape painter, Suzor-Coté painted a number of still-lives during the first fifteen years of his career. One of the earliest (1892; Montreal Museum of Fine Arts) depicts a closed fan with oranges and a wine glass arranged on a flat surface. The objects evoke many aspects of the good life a young Canadian artist might wish to lead in Paris: food, drink, theatre, illicit romance. The still-lives from the middle of the decade are more finished, two of 1895 almost trompe-l’oeil, presaging his still-lives of hanging game realized back home in 1897. During the mid-nineties he painted a number of floral studies, one of lilies with a music score, one of white roses, and one depicting a vase of yellow and white daisies (1897; Montreal Museum of Fine Arts).

More fluid in treatment and subtle in colouring are two still-lives dated 1902. Still-Life with Onions (NGC) is a virtuoso performance in its depiction of textures and of the reflections on a copper pot and jug with unpeeled onions and garlic arranged on a rough, flat surface. In his humble portrayal of objects from everyday life the artist is clearly paying homage to the Dutch painters of the 17th century. In a related work, Still-life with Apples and Chestnuts (private collection), the artist contrasts the polished surface of a copper brazier, the green glaze of a jug, and the roasted chestnut shells arranged with three apples on an identical ledge.

Stylistically, Still-life with Fruit bears certain similarities to the 1902 paintings and thus suggests a common date. Oranges, apples, and lemons are arranged on what appears to be a silver tray, while in the foreground a lemon casts its reflection on the light-coloured surface. Some ill-defined forms emerge from the indistinct background. Absent are the studio props of the other two works, with all their academic implications. Here the artist merely focuses on the colour and textures of the objects bathed in a soft light. The immediacy of the study is enhanced by the tight framing and absence of a ledge. The objects exist in their own space, glowing with colour. Beautifully and sensuously painted, this work marks a new departure in Suzor-Coté’s oeuvre. Leaving behind the historical and academic formulae, he delights in form, texture, colour, and light as he would in the superb Winter Landscape of 1909 (NGC).

Exhibiting Brilliance

SHARING ART – MAKING THE COLLECTION KNOWN BOTH IN CANADA AND ABROAD – IS CENTRAL TO THE MANDATE OF THE NATIONAL GALLERY. THROUGH ON-SITE AND TRAVELLING EXHIBITIONS ORGANIZED AND COORDINATED IN COOPERATION WITH MUSEUMS AND GALLERIES AROUND THE WORLD, THE GALLERY OFFERS CANADIANS OPPORTUNITIES TO HEIGHTEN THEIR APPRECIATION AND ENJOYMENT OF ALL FORMS OF VISUAL ART.

OVER THE PAST YEAR, THE NATIONAL GALLERY MOUNTED SEVERAL EXHIBITIONS OF NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL RELEVANCE THAT EXPLORED INFLUENTIAL PERIODS IN THE HISTORY OF ART. ELEVEN KEY PRESENTATIONS BY THE GALLERY AND CMCP ARE HIGHLIGHTED BELOW. A COMPLETE LISTING OF ALL ON-SITE AND TRAVELLING EXHIBITIONS CAN BE FOUND AT THE END OF THE REPORT.

PICASSO: MASTERWORKS FROM THE MUSEUM OF MODERN ART

The National Gallery was one of only three venues to host this outstanding exhibition of over 100 works by Pablo Picasso. Organized by New York's Museum of Modern Art and featuring works from the MOMA collection, the exhibition offered a view of the artist's development over a period of 67 years, emphasizing personal themes and stylistic shifts. It was sponsored by Midland Walwyn.

HOGARTH AND HIS TIMES

Commemorating the 300th anniversary of William Hogarth's birth, this exhibition, organized by the British Museum and the Berkeley Art Museum (University of California), showcased remarkable prints and drawings by Hogarth, his contemporaries, and his successors. Juxtaposing the work of other artists with four series of images by Hogarth – A Harlot's Progress, A Rake's Progress, Marriage à-la-Mode, and Industry and Idleness – the exhibition provided a fresh look at Hogarth's satire, which encompassed the whole spectrum of British society. The Parnassus Foundation funded a complementary colloquium program.

CHAR DAVIES: ÉPHÉMÈRE

As part of an ongoing commitment to contemporary art, the National Gallery presented this interactive, virtual-reality experience. Designed to enable visitors to access varying states of consciousness as they moved through a simulated underwater-diving environment, Éphémère involved computers, sound synthesizers, a stereoscopic head-mounted display, and video projectors. The exhibition was co-produced by Char Davies / Immersence Inc. with Softimage Inc., and sponsored by La Fondation Daniel Langlois.

CROSSINGS

Organized by the National Gallery, this major international exhibition examined the influence of dislocation, migration, and territorial rearrangement on contemporary art. Fifteen prominent artists from Canada and abroad participated, contributing a diversity of artistic concerns expressed in a new, transnational, cross-cultural visual language. A testament to the creativity of its curators and handlers, the exhibition featured works of different scales – many installed by the artists themselves – and reflected the Gallery's commitment to exhibiting contemporary works. An exhibition catalogue was published by the Gallery, featuring essays from the world-renowned writers Hou Hanru and Nikos Papastergiadis. Institutional loans were contributed by the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum and the Vancouver Art Gallery. The British Council provided valuable support in fabricating and transporting selected works.

SONGS ON STONE: JAMES MCNEILL WHISTLER AND THE ART OF LITHOGRAPHY

James McNeill Whistler made significant contributions to the artistic currents of his time, from realism and aestheticism to symbolism and modernism. Although his art and ideas were once perceived as radical, today

Whistler is revered for the quiet power of his portraits and the mesmerizing purity of his nearly abstract nocturnes. Organized by The Art Institute of Chicago, Songs on Stone presented for the first time the relationship between Whistler's pastels, etchings, paintings, and drawings and the full range of his achievements in lithography.

MONTREAL MÉTROPOLE, 1880-1930

A collaborative study by scholars from several disciplines, this exhibition of prints, photographs, and architectural drawings provided important insight into the forces that influenced Montreal architecture in the early 1900s. Organized by the Canadian Centre for Architecture, Montreal Métropole explored the extraordinary prosperity of the city between 1880 and 1930, tracing its development from a prime rail and sea transportation hub to a national financial and industrial centre, and highlighting the architectural choices that shaped the urban landscape.

THE ART OF PRINTMAKING IN QUEBEC, 1945-1990

Organized by the Musée du Québec, this exhibition presented the works of some 60 Quebec artists. It offered a lively perspective on the eclecticism that is the hallmark of contemporary Quebec printmaking. The show explored the influences of cubism, surrealism, lyricism, and other art movements on printmaking, as well as advances in paper sculpting, mezzotint, and lithography.

Robert Murray: The Factory as Studio

FRENCH PRINTS FROM THE AGE OF THE MUSKETEERS

This exhibition, organized by the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, revealed the diversity of printmaking from 1610 to 1660. The selection of prints was based on quality and on the desire to illustrate the scope of life in 17th-century France. Works were arranged by topic to juxtapose fine-arts prints by major artists with broader, more popular print productions.

ROBERT MURRAY: THE FACTORY AS STUDIO

Organized by the National Gallery, this was the first major exhibition of Robert Murray's work in Canada since 1983. The Factory as Studio presented 38 masterful sculptures accompanied by models, prints, and drawings from three decades of artistic production both at the Gallery and in public spaces within the National Capital Region. It traced the development of the Vancouver-born artist's work from his reductive sculpture of the 1960s to the lavish and expressive works of the 1970s, to the introduction of a new modulation of meaning into his abstract works of the 1980s. An exhibition catalogue was published by the Gallery, with an introduction by the art critic Barbara Rose.

INTERFACE: ENCOUNTERS WITH NEW TECHNOLOGY

CMCP's popular summer exhibition Interface: Encounters with New Technology explored the human-technological interface through the work of nine contemporary artists. The exhibition addressed such diverse concerns as electronic communication, cosmetic surgery, genetic engineering, surveillance, and cyberculture.

GABOR SZILASI: PHOTOGRAPHS 1954–1996

This was the first retrospective of photographs by the Hungarian native Gabor Szilasi. Covering 40 years of work through a selection of over 90 colour and black-and-white photographs, the exhibition explored the influence of this pioneer in art photography. It included studies of the artist's favourite themes, such as rural Quebec, Montreal portraiture, and architecture. The exhibition was organized by Franck Michel for Vox Populi, Montreal.

Unwavering Commitment to Curatorial Excellence

OF PARAMOUNT IMPORTANCE TO THE NATIONAL GALLERY ARE ACQUIRING, PRESERVING, RESEARCHING, AND RECORDING HISTORIC AND CONTEMPORARY WORKS OF ART, BOTH NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL. THESE ARE THE FUNDAMENTAL OBJECTIVES ON WHICH THE NATIONAL GALLERY WAS BUILT. LAST YEAR, THROUGH STRONG CURATORIAL LEADERSHIP, THE GALLERY EXCEEDED THESE OBJECTIVES BY SECURING SEVERAL PRODIGIOUS ACQUISITIONS, MANAGING NUMEROUS NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITIONS, UNDERTAKING SIGNIFICANT LOANS TO OTHER INSTITUTIONS, AND REALIZING CELEBRATED ACHIEVEMENTS IN SCHOLARSHIP.

Anne Ruggles, Senior Conservator

ACQUIRING COMPLEMENTS

Over the past year, the National Gallery sought and acquired an outstanding group of works – purchases and gifts rich in artistic merit, content, and history.

Complementing the Canadian Collection were acquisitions of Untitled by Jean-Paul Riopelle and Black and White Trees and Buildings by David Milne. Enhancing the European Collection was the brilliant acquisition of Portrait of a Man with a Felt Hat by the Italian painter Lorenzo Lotto. This painting joined two other works by Lotto already in the Gallery's permanent collection.

Other notable additions to the European Collection were Garden of an Italian Villa by the French artist Hubert Robert and Peter Paul Rubens's A Stormy Landscape, a most generous gift donated by Mr. and Mrs. Michal Hornstein, which would otherwise have been too costly for the Gallery to acquire. All acquisitions contributed to building the Gallery's collection into one of the finest in the world.

Purchases by the Canadian Museum of Contemporary Photography, the affiliate museum of the National Gallery, included first-time acquisitions from Janieta Eyre and Sasha Yungju Lee, two major photographic works by the artist Roy Kiyooka and additions to the collection of works by Montreal's Holly King, Toronto's Doug Clark, and Saskatoon's Brenda Pelkey.

DISPLAYING EXCELLENCE

Over the past year, the National Gallery hosted a number of spectacular and insightful exhibitions. Special reference must be made to those exhibitions organized and mounted by the National Gallery and CMCP themselves – Robert Murray: The Factory as Studio, an exhibition of masterful sculptures, models, prints, and drawings from three decades of artistic production; Crossings, a transnational, cross-cultural exhibition of contemporary art; and mid-career exhibitions of the work of the Canadian contemporary photographers Holly King and Eldon Garnet. The Gallery is equally proud of its partnerships with other museums and galleries including its collaboration with the Canadian Centre for Architecture for Montreal Métropole, the Musée du Québec for The Art of Printmaking in Quebec, 1945-1990, and New York's Museum of Modern Art for the superb Picasso: Masterworks from the Museum of Modern Art.

FOCUSING ON THE COLLECTION

Beyond major exhibitions, the Gallery presented a number of installations featuring works from the permanent collection. A Collective Vision: Gifts to the Photographs Collection exhibited the impressive depth and scope of the Gallery's Photographs Collection, owed largely to generous donations through the years. Yousuf Karsh: Portraits of Artists celebrated the photographer's 90th birthday with a presentation of his portraits of artists such as Marc Chagall, Barnett Newman, and Andy Warhol. In addition, the Gallery exhibited 19th-century ceramics donated in 1997-98 by Ruth Amelia Jackson – exquisite tiles and hollow-ware created by the renowned decorative artist William De Morgan.

SHARING ARTISTIC TREASURES

As part of the fulfilment of the Gallery's objective to educate and communicate, loans were made both internationally and nationally to other art museums and galleries. In February, The Frick Collection of New York premiered a stunning exhibition of 67 French and English master drawings from the 18th and 19th centuries – the first presentation of such an extensive selection of Gallery works in New York City. Also significant were the loans of some 70 portraits for the exhibition About Face at the Vancouver Art Gallery, and of technical expertise for the Down from the Shimmering Sky masks exhibition at the McMichael Canadian Art Collection in Kleinburg, Ontario.

RESEARCH

As the research centre of the National Gallery, the Library and Archives continued to publish and exhibit relevant curatorial papers and books. The Library published the second instalment in its Occasional Paper series, Index to the National Gallery of Canada Bulletin and Annual Bulletin, and inaugurated the permanent exhibition facility of the Library and Archives with the installation Invading the Book: Recent Acquisitions of Artists' Books and Multiples. A second exhibition, Rare Canadiana, featured recent acquisitions of 19th- and early 20th-century titles. Beyond these activities, the Library and Archives took on administration of the Research Fellowship Program.

Marion Barclay, Chief, Restoration and Conservation

Richard Gagnier, Conservator, and Tracey Klein, Intern

The Gallery's excellence in curatorial scholarship and publishing was honoured with the First Prize in the Craft, Technology and Scientific Category of the distinguished Kraszna-Krausz Photography Book Awards for Beauty of Another Order: Photography in Science. The catalogue was published by the National Gallery of Canada and Yale University Press in conjunction with the exhibition of the same title.

Underlining its deep commitment to scholarship, the Gallery appointed Dr. David Franklin as the new Curator of Prints and Drawings. Only the third such curator since the Gallery was founded, Dr. Franklin brings to the position extensive research experience and expertise in Italian art. A graduate of Queen's University, Kingston, and the Courtauld Institute, London, as well as a Fellow of All Souls College, Oxford, he is recognized as one of the world's leading young historians of the Renaissance.

LECTURES AND TOURS

As part of an ongoing commitment to education, the curators of the National Gallery continued to lecture to local, national, and international audiences. These presentations included engagements sponsored by the Gallery as part of a new On Tour lecture series. In addition, Dr. Colin B. Bailey, Deputy Director and Chief Curator, continued production of a series of television presentations for CBC's national program Midday profiling individual works from the Gallery's permanent collection.

Extending

Our Reach

OF ALL THE GALLERY'S MANDATED OBJECTIVES, EDUCATION AND COMMUNICATION ARE VITAL TO ITS GROWTH AND OUTREACH AS A PREMIER ART INSTITUTION. IN ALL ITS EFFORTS, THE GALLERY SEEKS TO FURTHER KNOWLEDGE, UNDERSTANDING, AND ENJOYMENT OF THE VISUAL ARTS AMONG CANADIANS.

WORKING IN CLOSE PARTNERSHIP WITH CURATORIAL AND EXHIBITIONS DEPARTMENTS, THE PUBLIC AFFAIRS AND NATIONAL OUTREACH TEAMS OF THE NATIONAL GALLERY UNDERTOOK A SERIES OF ACTIVITIES DESIGNED TO REACQUAINT CANADIANS WITH THE GALLERY'S PERMANENT COLLECTION, TO PROMOTE AND ENHANCE SPECIAL EXHIBITIONS, AND TO CELEBRATE ACQUISITIONS OF ART.

ACCENT ON ACCESSIBILITY

During the fiscal year 1998–99, the National Gallery undertook a comprehensive review and revitalization of the Public Affairs program to bring the treasures of the Gallery to a wider audience.

Following the appointment of a Director of Public Affairs in September, the Gallery embarked upon a strategy uniting all objectives and activities related to interaction with the public. The comprehensive plan identified seven key goals:

- Enhance audience appreciation and understanding of the Gallery by working with exhibitions and curatorial staff to ensure that a marketing perspective is included in the Gallery's decision-making process.
- Significantly increase promotional and media relations activities for the permanent collection and special exhibitions.
- Restructure publishing to meet scholarly, institutional, educational and promotional goals more effectively.
- Re-focus and prioritize educational and public programming.
- Ensure a strong and high-quality client focus in all Visitor Services operations.
- Conduct extensive research into audience needs and values.
- Maximize revenue-generation opportunities.

To achieve these strategic goals, the Gallery launched a number of initiatives during the past year.

PROMOTING PICASSO

During the first quarter, the marketing efforts focused on promoting the Picasso exhibition and related family programming. The results were outstanding: attendance surpassed 253,000 – well beyond projections – and media relations efforts sparked extensive national coverage by print, radio, and television outlets.

PROFILING PERMANENCE

Following the Picasso exhibition, plans were developed to inspire a fresh public perception of the Gallery as an accessible and welcoming year-round attraction for visitors of all ages. To this end, a major advertising campaign was created to promote the Gallery's permanent collection. This included the production of colourful, eye-catching banners for display outside the Gallery. In addition, a television advertising campaign was designed to attract regional audiences, thematic Gallery tours for visitors were introduced, and the Gallery website was completely redesigned.

CULTURAL TOURISM

During the first quarter, the National Gallery received one of Ottawa's most prestigious tourism awards for excellence in marketing and presentation of the previous year's Renoir exhibition. The Gallery continued to provide leadership in cultural tourism through participation in the Canadian Tourism Commission's Product Development Committee.

POWER OF THE PRINTED WORD

One of the most exciting developments last year was the launch of Vernissage, a national magazine published by the Gallery for distribution to Friends across the country. Developed to create an ongoing dialogue with Canadians, Vernissage replaced the former newsletter Contact. Beyond this magazine, the Gallery also produced some sixty publications, including exhibition catalogues (two from CMCP) and brochures, flyers, and various educational and promotional texts.

ENGAGING FAMILIES

The Gallery launched Artissimo, a mobile interpretive activity centre for children ages three and over. Designed to encourage creativity and spur an early appreciation of the visual arts, youngsters can now consult books on art, complete quizzes, participate in demonstrations of artistic techniques led by animators, and create their own masterpieces. The Gallery also developed a monthly program of Family Fundays with engaging art activities for adults and children alike. These Fundays, which attracted close to 5,000 participants, were designed to make families more aware of educational opportunities and allow them to enjoy art experiences together. CMCP's Family Sundays program developed visitors' interest in photography through hands-on workshops, drop-in activities, tours, and music.

WELCOMING PATRONS

The Gallery's ongoing commitment to excellence in visitor services was reflected in a number of activities this past year. The information desks at the main entrance and in the Great Hall were redesigned to be more user-friendly. The re-design provides a more interactive approach with easier access to information about exhibitions and events. The Gallery also improved its systems for ticketing and reservations, and for pre-booking exhibitions.

VIRTUALLY CONNECTED

A key milestone in making the collection fully accessible was the development of CyberMuse, an engaging multimedia database of information about the National Gallery's permanent collection. Launched in the spring of 1999, CyberMuse allows audiences across Canada and

The Gallery appointed a Director of National Outreach and International Relations and conducted a thorough review of outreach activities to determine what ground had been well-covered and where there were gaps to be filled. This review inspired development of an outreach-initiatives proposal for circulation to public galleries and museums across Canada. Suggestions included co-acquisitions of artworks, long- and short-term loans from the National Gallery's permanent collection, co-organization of exhibitions, involvement in touring exhibitions, and opportunities for researching and developing exhibitions at the Gallery. In addition, the proposal suggested study and training programs such as internships and job shadowing, and exchange projects including a speakers' bureau.

EXCHANGE AND COLLABORATION

To elicit response to the outreach-initiatives proposal, the Director of National Outreach and International Relations travelled to 25 art galleries and museums in 15 Canadian cities. These visits strengthened the Gallery's connections with its sister institutions in communities across the country. They also contributed to establishing a network that will lead to a stronger collaboration among members of the national art community and to increased opportunities for artistic exchange. The priorities identified by the galleries and museums surveyed will be presented to the Gallery's Board of Trustees in the fiscal year 1999–2000.

SHOWCASE TO THE WORLD

The international arena was the setting for a number of highly successful forays last year. Working with Canadian embassies in other countries, the National Gallery coordinated two key exhibitions. Terre sauvage, a Group of Seven exhibition, will be held in August 1999 at the Museo de Arte Moderno in Mexico City and will subsequently travel to Stockholm, Copenhagen, Lillehammer, and perhaps Helsinki. It may also visit the Peoples Republic of China. Mexican Modern Art, 1900–1950, coordinated in partnership with the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts, will be shown at the National Gallery of Canada from February to May 2000. Both projects enabled the Gallery to raise Canada's cultural profile on the international scene.

CyberMuse on-line around the globe to navigate layers of information on art and artists, make inquiries, participate in activities, and offer feedback. CyberMuse is accessible on-line through the Internet or at the Gallery itself, where a multimedia facility has been created to receive on-site visitors.

WEAVING A TAPESTRY

As part of its mandated objective to make the collection known both in Canada and abroad, the National Gallery undertook several national and international outreach initiatives last year.

Building

Relationships

ACHIEVING THE MANDATED OBJECTIVES MEANS, IN PART, HAVING THE RESOURCES TO DO SO. OVER THE PAST YEAR, THE NATIONAL GALLERY TOOK SEVERAL STEPS TO REFOCUS REVENUE-GENERATION EFFORTS TOWARD BUILDING AND NURTURING LONG-TERM RELATIONSHIPS WITH CANADIAN FAMILIES AND CORPORATE PARTNERS – ENCOURAGING THEM TO TAKE OWNERSHIP OF THEIR NATIONAL GALLERY.

A DIRECTOR OF DEVELOPMENT WAS APPOINTED, A COMPREHENSIVE REVIEW OF PAST FUNDRAISING STRATEGIES AND ACTIVITIES WAS UNDERTAKEN, AND A FIVE-YEAR DEVELOPMENT PLAN WAS CREATED WITH THREE PRIMARY OBJECTIVES:

- DEVELOP A NATIONAL NETWORK AND COMMUNICATION STRATEGY TO BUILD GREATER AWARENESS AND MORE DYNAMIC SOURCES OF SUPPORT FOR THE GALLERY THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY.
- CREATE A NATIONAL OUTREACH STRATEGY AIMED AT FACILITATING ACCESS TO THE GALLERY FROM ANY POINT IN CANADA.
- ESTABLISH A NATIONAL FUNDRAISING STRATEGY AIMED AT RAISING REVENUE.

MANAGING MEMBERSHIP

Responsibility for membership activities returned to the Gallery after years of management by dedicated volunteers. A comprehensive review of past benefits to Members, The Friends of the National Gallery, was conducted and a three-year membership plan was proposed to realize cost efficiencies, provide enhanced service to Friends, focus on the needs of a growing clientele, and create consistent levels of membership support in the National Capital Region and Canada-wide.

TELEMARKETING DRIVE

Much effort was devoted to increasing membership. Working with the Volunteers' Circle, the newly named, 40-year-old volunteer organization, the Gallery continued the telemarketing campaign initiated in the fiscal year 1997-98. It was a tremendous success: membership increased from 2,700 to 14,000, surpassing the target of 10,000 – vivid evidence of the public's receptiveness to becoming part of the National Gallery family.

ACKNOWLEDGING ALTRUISM

Once again, the 300 members of the Volunteers' Circle were critical to the Gallery's many successes. The Gallery is very appreciative of their generous participation in education programs, school visits, guided tours, study and lecture groups, curatorial clinics, the Prints and Drawings Study Room, travel projects, and concert series. Last year, volunteers contributed an impressive 35,000 hours. The Gallery deeply values their involvement in the life of the museum.

PLAYING HOST

Many special events were held in celebration of the building's 10th anniversary. An open house offered visitors a first-ever behind-the-scenes tour including stops at conservation labs, art vaults, graphics studios, and framing workshops. A lecture by the architect of the National Gallery, Moshe Safdie, on the evolution of the building itself was another highlight. Beyond hosting its own events, the Gallery continued to rent out space for private social functions, and in collaboration with different embassies and organizations presented lecture series, events associated with local festivals, and many popular concert series.

MUSIC AT THE GALLERY

Over the last ten years, the National Gallery has built a strong reputation for excellence in both contemporary and classical music programming. In 1998-99 the Gallery organized Arte Flamenco and the three-part summer music series Rascals! Roots and Rads – comprising Rascals! On the Jazz Fringe, and AlternaFest – and co-produced Music for a Sunday Afternoon, Pianos at the Gallery, Ottawa in Concert, Concerts aux Beaux-Arts, Concerts Plus, Espace Musique, and Strings of the Future as well as many other performances supported by various embassies. All of these concerts featured artists from Canada and abroad and presented a mix of programs for children and families, including jazz, alternative, and avant-garde music. Attendance has been strong, and the programs enjoy general critical acclaim and substantial media coverage, in particular from print and radio. Many concerts were recorded for national broadcast and re-broadcast, keeping the music alive throughout the year.

APPLAUDING GENEROSITY

Corporate sponsors were also extraordinarily generous in making donations as well as in-kind contributions in the travel, media, publishing, and accommodation sectors. The Gallery recognizes, in particular, The American Express Foundation for its three-year commitment to CyberMuse, the Gallery's new on-line art database. Such contributions enable the Gallery to organize major exhibitions in collaboration with cultural centres around the world. The Gallery wishes to express deep appreciation to the following corporate sponsors for their generosity.

MANAGEMENT'S RESPONSIBILITY FOR FINANCIAL REPORTING

The accompanying financial statements of the National Gallery of Canada (the Gallery) and all information in this annual report are the responsibility of management. The financial statements include some amounts that are necessarily based on management's estimates and judgement.

The financial statements have been prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. Financial information presented elsewhere in the annual report is consistent with that contained in the financial statements.

In discharging its responsibility for the integrity and fairness of the financial statements, management maintains financial and management control systems and practices designed to provide reasonable assurance that transactions are authorized, assets are safeguarded and proper records are maintained and transactions are in accordance with Part X of the Financial Administration Act and regulations, the Museums Act, and the by-laws of the Gallery.

The Board of Trustees is responsible for ensuring that management fulfils its responsibilities for maintaining adequate control systems and the quality of financial reporting. The Audit and Evaluation Committee of the Board of Trustees meets regularly with management and internal and external auditors to discuss auditing, internal controls and other relevant financial matters. The Committee reviews the financial statements and presents its recommendation to the Board of Trustees. The Board of Trustees approves the financial statements.

The external auditor, the Auditor General of Canada, is responsible for auditing the financial statements and for issuing his report thereon to the Minister of Canadian Heritage.

AUDITOR'S REPORT

To the Minister of Canadian Heritage

I have audited the balance sheet of the National Gallery of Canada as at 31 March 1999 and the statements of operations, changes in equity of Canada and cash flows for the year then ended. These financial statements are the responsibility of the Gallery's management. My responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on my audit.

I conducted my audit in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards. Those standards require that I plan and perform an audit to obtain reasonable assurance whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation.

In my opinion, these financial statements present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of the Gallery as at 31 March 1999 and the results of its operations and its cash flows for the year then ended in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. As required by the Financial Administration Act, I report that, in my opinion, these principles have been applied, after giving retroactive effect to the change in the method of accounting for parliamentary appropriations used to finance depreciable capital assets as explained in Note 3 to the financial statements, on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

Further, in my opinion, the transactions of the Gallery that have come to my notice during my audit of the financial statements have, in all significant respects, been in accordance with Part X of the Financial Administration Act and regulations, the Museums Act and the by-laws of the Gallery.

Notes to Financial Statements

31 March 1999

1. Authority, Objectives and Activities

The National Gallery of Canada (the Gallery) was established on 1 July 1990 by the Museums Act as a Crown corporation under Part I of Schedule III to the Financial Administration Act.

The Gallery's mandate as stated in the Museums Act is to develop, maintain and make known throughout Canada and internationally, a collection of works of art, both historic and contemporary, with special but not exclusive reference to Canada, and to further knowledge, understanding and enjoyment of art in general among all Canadians. The Gallery's operations include its affiliate, the Canadian Museum of Contemporary Photography (CMCP).

The Gallery's operations are divided into four mutually supportive activities which work together to meet all aspects of its mandate. These activities are:

COLLECT

To acquire, preserve, research and record historic and contemporary works of art, both national and international, to represent Canada's visual arts heritage and to use in its programs.

EDUCATE AND COMMUNICATE

To further knowledge, understanding and enjoyment of the visual arts among all Canadians and to make the collections known both in Canada and abroad.

ACCOMMODATE

To provide a secure and suitable facility for the preservation and exhibition of the national collections of visual arts that is readily accessible to the public.

ADMINISTER

To provide direction, control and effective development and administration of resources

2. Significant Accounting Policies

These financial statements have been prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. The significant accounting policies are:

(A) INVENTORIES

Inventories are valued at the lower of cost and market value. In the case of books and publications, cost is written down over a maximum of three years to take into account obsolescence.

(B) CAPITAL ASSETS

Capital assets are recorded at cost and amortized using the straight-line method over their estimated useful lives as follows:

Equipment and furniture	5 to 12 years
Leasehold improvements	25 years
Building improvements	25 years
Vehicles	5 years

The original cost of the buildings occupied by the Gallery is not shown in the financial statements. The buildings are owned by the Government of Canada.

(C) COLLECTION

The Gallery holds a collection of works of art for the benefit of Canadians, present and future. The collection is shown as an asset at a nominal value of $ 1,000 due to the practical difficulties of determining a meaningful value for these assets. Works of art purchased for the collection of the Gallery are recorded as an expense in the year of acquisition. Works of art donated to the Gallery are not recorded in the books of account.

(D) PENSION PLAN

The employees of the Gallery participate in the Public Service Superannuation Plan administered by the Government of Canada. The employees and the Gallery contribute equally to the cost of the Plan. This contribution represents the total pension obligation of the Gallery. Contributions in respect of current service are expensed during the year in which services are rendered. Admissible past service contributions are expensed when paid.

The Gallery is not required under present legislation to make contributions with respect to actuarial deficiencies of the Public Service Superannuation Account.

(E) EMPLOYEE TERMINATION BENEFITS

On termination of employment, employees of the Gallery are entitled to certain benefits provided for under their collective agreements and their conditions of employment. The cost of these benefits is expensed in the year in which the benefits are earned.

(F) PARLIAMENTARY APPROPRIATIONS

The Gallery receives funding from the Government of Canada. The portion of the parliamentary appropriation used to purchase depreciable capital assets is recorded as deferred capital funding and amortized on the same basis and over the same periods as the related capital assets. The remaining portion of the appropriations is recorded on the statement of operations.

Parliamentary appropriations for the purchase of objects for the collection are initially recorded in the Special Purpose Account in the year of entitlement and are recognized in the statement of operations at the time the acquisitions are made.

(G) CONTRIBUTIONS

The Gallery follows the deferral method of accounting for contributions. Unrestricted contributions are recognized as revenue when received or receivable if the amount to be received can be reasonably estimated and collection is reasonably assured. Externally restricted contributions and related investment income are deferred and recognized as revenue in the year in which the related expenses are incurred. Endowment contributions are recorded as endowments on the balance sheet. The investment income arising from such contributions is deferred and recognized as revenue in the year in which the related expenses are incurred.

The Board of Trustees has directed that certain unrestricted contributions and interest income arising from such contributions be internally restricted for the purpose of acquiring objects for the collection and related activities.

Contributed services are recorded at their fair value at the date they are received by the Gallery. Volunteers contribute a significant number of hours per year. Because of the difficulty of determining their fair value, their contributed services are not recognized in these financial statements.

(H) BOOKSTORE AND PUBLISHING

Expenses for the bookstore and publishing are included in operating expenses.

3. Change in Accounting Policy

Prior to 1998-99, the funding received from the Government of Canada for operations and capital was recorded as equity. Effective 1 April 1998, the portion of the parliamentary appropriation used to purchase depreciable capital assets is now recorded as deferred capital funding on the balance sheet, in order to conform to the recommendations of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants (CICA), and is amortized on the same basis and over the same period as the related capital assets. This change in accounting policy has been applied retroactively and the financial statements of prior years have been restated. The effect of this change in accounting policy is a reduction in equity and an increase in deferred capital funding on the balance sheet of $ 8,919,000 (1998 - $ 7,768,000), and a decrease in results of operations after government funding for the year of $ 1,151,000 (1998 - $ 314,000).

4. Cash and Investments

The Gallery makes short term, low risk investments in the money market. These investments consist of a mix of Bankers' Acceptances and Money Market Mutual Funds. The portfolio yielded an average return of 4.60 % (3.60 % in 1997-98) and the average term to maturity was 104 days (109 days in 1997-98). The carrying value of these investments approximates their fair market value.

Each year, the Gallery receives a $ 3,000,000 appropriation for the purchase of objects for the collection. The Gallery accumulates these funds, as well as the interest thereon, in a special purpose account which it uses to acquire, when opportunities arise, historically important, unique and high quality works that strengthen the collection.

11. Endowments

Endowments consist of restricted donations received by the Gallery. The endowment principal is required to be maintained intact. The investment income generated from endowments is treated as a deferred contribution and must be used in accordance with the various purposes established by the donors. The Gallery ensures that all funds with a restricted purpose are expended for the purpose for which they were provided.

12. Commitments

As at 31 March 1999, there remains $10,900,000 to be paid pursuant to various agreements. The major portion relates to the remainder of a 49 year lease with the National Capital Commission for the CMCP facility. The future minimum payments are as follows:

	(in thousands of dollars)
1999-00	$ 1,130
2000-01	407
2001-02	353
2002-03	326
2003-42	8,684

13. Contingent Liabilities

Revenue Canada has challenged certain Goods and Services Tax (GST) Input Tax Credits claimed by the Gallery since October 1993. The issue revolves around whether the Gallery's free general admission policy, which started in October 1993, constitutes an "exempt supply" under the Excise Tax Act and whether the associated Input Tax Credits should be consequently disallowed. Because of the multiple unresolved issues, it is not clear as to whether Revenue Canada will proceed with an assessment and, if so, on what basis.

14. Related Party Transactions

The Gallery is related in terms of common ownership to all Government of Canada departments, agencies and Crown corporations. The Gallery enters into transactions with these entities in the normal course of business.

15. Foundation

In 1997-98, the National Gallery of Canada Foundation (the NGC Foundation) was incorporated under the Canada Corporations Act. It was given its charitable status by Revenue Canada on 1 April 1998. This is an entity distinct from the Gallery and the funds raised will be used for the sole benefit of the Gallery, as will be determined by the NGC Foundation.

16. Uncertainty Due to the Year 2000

The Year 2000 Issue arises because many computerized systems use two digits rather than four to identify a year. Date-sensitive systems may recognize the Year 2000 as 1900 or some other date, resulting in errors when information using Year 2000 dates is processed. In addition, similar problems may arise in some systems which use certain dates in 1999 to represent something other than a date. The effects of the Year 2000 Issue may be experienced before or after 1 January 2000 and, if not addressed, the impact on operations and financial reporting may range from minor errors to significant system failure which could affect an entity's ability to conduct normal business operations. It is not possible to be certain that all aspects of the Year 2000 Issue affecting the Gallery, including those related to the efforts of customers, suppliers and other third parties, will be fully resolved.

17. Comparative Figures

Certain reclassifications have been made to the 1997-98 comparative figures to conform with the current year's presentation. A change in the Gallery's internal organizational structure resulted in a decrease in the 1997-98 expenses for "Collect" of $ 1,298,000 and a corresponding increase in the expenses for "Educate and Communicate".
