

Hall Beach 2006

Hall Beach is located on the shore of Foxe Basin on the Melville Peninsula. Hall Beach was created when a Distant Early Warning (DEW) Line site was built in the area in 1957 to help monitor Canadian air space in the Far North. Although the DEW line is no longer operational, there is a more technologically advanced North Warning System radar site in the community to replace it.

In the late 1950's and early 1960's Inuit moved from surrounding camps to work around the DEW line site and the community was born. Hall Beach is considered one of the more traditional communities in Nunavut. The traditional name for Hall Beach is Sanirayak or "one that is along the coast". Hall Beach is a spectacular place to see walrus, seals, waterfowl and other arctic wildlife; fishing for arctic char is superb.

For more information about Hall Beach and its attractions, visit the Nunavut Handbook website at: <http://www.arctictravel.com/chapters/hallpage.html>.

Getting There: First Air operates flights from Iqaluit to Hall Beach on Mondays through Saturday. Please check with the Airlines for schedule changes.
