Partnerships

To realize its vision and plan for the future, the National Capital Commission must work closely with key partners in the Capital. Federal agencies, the cities of Ottawa and Gatineau, and the private sector including tourism partners, are all necessary to success. Working together, these partners can create sustainable and lively districts that integrate heritage features, residential and commercial development, and recreational elements. Partner consultation will help to establish priorities for implementation.

Partnerships are also the best means by which the National Capital Commission can increase nation-wide representation of Canada's diverse regions and cultures.

All Canadians should be able to participate in shaping their nation's Capital.

Critical Mass and Balance

As the plan unfolds, priorities for development will be established to ensure that critical mass, a factor for success, is achieved in any new area.

When this Vision is realized, there will be more programming balance on the two sides of the Ottawa River, and between the east and west sides of the Core Area.

Implementation Opportunities

Proposals contained in this document will be implemented after consideration of feasibility, cost, and social, economic and environmental effects. The pace of implementation of this Vision will, to a large extent, be determined by successful integration into urban planning and land-use development projects. Programming and District Plans

Direction in this Vision can be broadly applied to all future programming in the Core Area. The broad principles and direction for the public experience of the Core Area which are outlined in this Vision will be further examined and addressed through the development of implementation plans. These plans will provide more detailed direction and a 10 to 20 year perspective for specific public programming initiatives including: commemorations, events (Capital Stages), interpretation, animation and programming, visitor services and recreational activities.
