SERIES 11: TERRITORIAL COURT RECORDS - INTRODUCTION

Approximately a thousand miners were searching the tributaries of the Yukon River for gold in the mid-1880s. At this time, the Yukon was under the legal jurisdiction of the North West Territories, though because of its remoteness, the influence of an established court system was not felt. The prevailing form of law and order was the miners' meeting, a form of justice used by the predominately American miners in the area.

Inspector Constantine of the N.W.M.P. was sent to the Yukon in 1894, and he wrote of these meetings: "The American miners meetings had the power of life and death over the members of the community. It could hang a man, give him a divorce, imprison, banish or lash him." Any prospector could call a meeting simply by posting a notice. An elected chairman performed the function of judge, while the entire meeting acted as jury. Both sides could produce witnesses and state their case. Anybody who wished could ask a question or make a speech. The verdict was decided by a show of hands.

In June 1895, Inspector Constantine returned to the Yukon with a force of eighteen men and managed to abolish the miners' meetings and establish his authority. In his report for that year he noted that civil courts were urgently required to settle disputes. With the influx of population following the discovery of the fabulously rich Klondike gold deposits in August 1896, the federal government became more interested in establishing law and order in the area.

The Canadian government appointed T.H. McGuire as Judge of the Court of the Yukon Provisional District in August, 1897. The Yukon Act of 1898 established Yukon as a separate territory, and changed the judicial structure by replacing this court with a superior court of record styled after the Territorial Court, which could consist of one or more judges. It provided that judicial procedure and administration were to conform as closely as possible to the practices found in the North West Territories. The Commissioner, Territorial Councillors, and commissioned officers of the North West Mounted Police were to possess the powers of one or two justices of the peace. The Act also specified the residence, tenure, oath of office, and rights and privileges of the judges. The power, authority, and jurisdiction of the court were to be the same as those of the court of the North West Territories. A judge of the court could not hold any other office or emolument under the Government of Canada.

In 1899 an amendment to the Yukon Act constituted the Supreme Court of British Columbia as a Court of Appeal for the territory. In May 1901, a further amendment provided for the appointment of a police magistrate at Dawson and at Whitehorse. These positions had jurisdiction in cases of theft, claims of debt, breach of contract and other personal actions where the amount claimed did not exceed $500. The Territorial Court retained jurisdiction in respect of actions for gambling debts, liquor offences, recovery of land, wills, libel, slander, and other more serious offences.

T.H. McQuire resigned as the Yukon's first judge just three months after his appointment. He was replaced by C.A. Dugas on October 7, 1898. In March of 1899, the Yukon Bar Association petitioned the federal government for two more judges because of the large number of cases awaiting trial. Two more judges of the Territorial Court were in fact appointed, the Hon. James Craig and the Hon. C.D. Macaulay.

Until 1912, the Territorial Court comprised three judges, and it was possible for appeals to be made from the decision of a police magistrate, to the Territorial Court en banc. This was defined in 1903 as being at least two of the three Territorial Court judges.

In 1912, an amendment to the Yukon Act reduced the number of Territorial Court judges to one. Judges Dugas and Craig left the Yukon. Judge Macaulay remained in office until his retirement from the Bench in 1940.

The Territorial Court records date from 1897 to 1950, and include Cases, Court Notebooks, Estates, Judges' Notebooks, Trial Judgements, Arguments, Appeal Books, and other miscellaneous records. They were originally received in a number of accessions. Cases were received in Accessions #77/6 and #83/23; Estates were received in Accession #79/114. Some unaccessioned and miscellaneous records are also included in this Finding Aid. Certain Court Notebooks and Judges' Records are cross-referenced from YRG 1 Series 8. In most cases, records were received in no apparent order. It was necessary to rearrange cases, estates, and other documents to correspond with the order indicated by original file and docket numbers. All records were retained. The Territorial Court Records comprise eight linear metres of archival storage space.

Some of the files are restricted. These contain personal information. Researchers will be granted access to material specifically relating to themselves. Researchers wishing to conduct blind statistical studies of information contained within these files may apply in writing to do so.

Funding for the organization of these records and the compilation of this funding aid was provided by the Canadian Council of Archives and the Yukon Archives under the C.C.A.s Arrangement and Description Backlog Reduction Cost Shared Cooperative Program. This Finding Aid was prepared by Nancy Cameron.

A. CASES 1898-1950

This section comprises case files (or dockets) which contain such documents as subpoenas, depositions, summonses, testimony, exhibits, and judgements.

Territorial court cases were originally received in two accessions, #77/6 and #83/23, and were organized in several systems. This original organization has been maintained in the listings which follow.

1. Annual / Sequentially Numbered Cases 1898-1950

The first listing contains cases which were assigned two-part numbers. The first number is a consecutive number assigned chronologically to cases heard in that year. Not all cases seem to have been assigned this number. The second number represents the year in which the case was heard.

2. Un-numbered Cases 1900-1908

3. Sequentially Numbered Cases 1900-1905

Many Territorial court cases between 1900 and 1905 were assigned consecutive case numbers that did not include a reference to the year the case was heard. This listing includes cases which were numbered consecutively over several years. It should be noted, however, that there is a gap of case numbers between 1902 and 1903. This possibly indicates that there were changes made in the system of assigning case numbers at that time, and that a subsequent series was begun.

B. COURT NOTEBOOKS 1898-1908

These volumes contain hand-written notes (some in shorthand) of court case proceedings. They appear to have been kept by the court reporter, and were the rough notes from which the final typed case proceedings were prepared. Several of these court notebooks are contained in Series 8 of the Central Registry Files (YRG 1). These have been cross-referenced in the listing below.

C. ESTATES 1897-1950

In the Yukon, no court of probate existed apart from the Territorial Court. It was in this court that wills were proved and Letters of Administration were issued.

This section contains individual estate files, which comprise the documentation required for the administration of an estate. These include wills, releases and transmission applications to transfer real property, certificates of administration, affidavits of relationship, and deeds to effect the transfer of real property, mining claims, chattels, and other assets. Some estates comprised more than one file, while some files contained documents pertaining to two estates. Estates were numbered consecutively. After 1947, it appears that a new numbering system was started. These records were received as Accession #79/114. A few estate files are also found in the Annual / Sequentially Numbered Cases. See cases 11/38 (GOV 1429 file 8), 10/46 (GOV 1430 file 18) and 1/47 (GOV 1430 file 19).

D. JUDGES' RECORDS 1898-1911

Several types of judges' records are contained within the Territorial Court records. These include Judges' Notebooks, Trial Judgements, Arguments, and Appeal Books.

1. Judges' Notebooks 1898-1911

These volumes contain hand-written notes made by judges during and after court proceedings. They were apparently used by the judges in arriving at decisions regarding verdicts in cases. Most of these notebooks appear to be those of Judge C.A. Dugas who was the senior judge in the territory from 1898 to 1912. Some of these volumes are cross referenced from YRG 1 Series 8.
