

Media Release- WCB Launches New Website

Yellowknife, NT (May 25, 2006)- The Workers' Compensation Board of the Northwest Territories and Nunavut has just launched their newest communication tool. The WCB's new website is now live and is located at www.wcb.nt.ca or www.wcbnunavut.ca.

"Our website is a key tool for our stakeholders," says David Clark, President & CEO. "It not only provides workers and employers with the resources they need to work with the WCB, but it also acts as an information resource used to learn about the functionality of our board."

The new site design is easier to navigate than the previous website, making information sharing and resources more readily available. The site content has also gone through extreme revisions to ensure that the information being passed along is valid and up-to-date; providing the public with the best information possible.

One of the newest functions of the site is the opportunity for stakeholders to provide feedback on revolving issues that are relevant to the WCB. To jump start the new site, the WCB has invited the public to provide feedback on the proposed new Safety Act Regulations.

The presence of such an effective communication tool is incredibly important as we continue to strive to better serve all of our stakeholders with consistent, accessible information.

-30-

Dave Grundy
Manager, Communications and Information
Workers' Compensation Board of the
Northwest Territories and Nunavut
Tel: 867-669-4442

Tanya Fraser
Communications Officer
Workers' Compensation Board of the
Northwest Territories and Nunavut
Tel: 867-669-4443