Shake Hands with the Devil: The Failure of Humanity in Rwanda

By Lieutenant General Roméo Dallaire

Canada's Book of the Year and #1 Best-Seller
2004 Governor General's Literary Award

Roméo Dallaire served for 35 years with the Canadian Forces. The best-selling Shake Hands With the Devil, about his experience as the Force Commander of the United Nations Mission to Rwanda in 1993-94, exposes the failure to stop one of the worst genocides of the 20th century. General Dallaire has written a powerful story of betrayal, naïveté, racism and international politics, a brave cautionary tale for our hard and selfish times. He also chronicles his own progression from confidant Cold Warrior to devastated UN commander, and finally to retired General struggling painfully, and publicly, to overcome post-traumatic stress disorder — the highest-ranking officer ever to share such experiences with readers.

Documentaries give us what the evening news cannot: the context, complexities, and human stories behind the major conflicts and political challenges of our time. Join us for a discussion about the urgency of these films and their potential impact to affect change with:

General Roméo Dallaire and director Peter Raymont Shake Hands with the Devil: The Journey of Romeo Dallaire; director Sean McAllister The Liberace of Baghdad;
director Eugene Jarecki Why We Fight;
and Nick Fraser, Storyville, BBC.

Moderated by John Anderson, chief film critic for Newsday.

In 1994 one man was given the task by the United Nations to ensure that peace was maintained in Rwanda: Canadian Lieutenant General Roméo Dallaire.

In 100 nightmarish days more than 800,000 men, women, and children were brutally murdered. The victims were Tutsi and moderate Hutus who supported them. Dallaire was thrown into a country he barely understood, leading ill equipped, untrained troops who did not want to be there. Unsupported by U.N. headquarters, Dallaire and his handful of soldiers were incapable of stopping the killing. This experience led to Dallaire's own life tragedy as he dealt with the psychological fallout of witnessing a genocide he was powerless to stop. Dallaire condemns top UN officials, disloyal Belgian troop commanders, and senior members of the Clinton administration who chose to do nothing as he pleaded each day for reinforcements and revised rules of engagement, convinced that with a few thousand more troops and a mandate to act, he could have stopped the killings.

Based on his best selling book, filmmaker Peter Raymont followed Dallaire during his first return trip to Rwanda, early in April 2004 on the 10th anniversary of the genocide, revisiting the killing fields that still haunt him. An extraordinary account by a primary witness.
