FORESTER

a broad spectrum!

"I've enjoyed working in forestry because there are always new issues and challenges. I enjoy getting out in the field when I can, and I like working with different individuals on a variety of projects."

Sarah Schwartz participated in the Junior Forest Ranger Program in her last year of high school. "Through interaction with forest officers—real people working in the field—I started to see forestry as a possible career."

Her interest in the outdoors and natural sciences and summer experience as a Junior Forest Ranger led to a forestry degree and, eventually, a career at Sustainable Resource Development as a forester.

Sarah's workday runs a broad spectrum, from reviewing a company's harvest plan to providing input on a FireSmart initiative to reduce the risk of wildfires.
