Members of the Alberta Justice Litigation Group represent the Alberta government before all courts and tribunals in the province. They are involved in a wide range of activities that includes preventative law, management of complex litigation and related strategic advice. Many issues involve collaboration with other departments or other groups within Justice.

This is a challenging time to be involved in public sector litigation. They are currently addressing the first class actions in the province and are increasingly being drawn into complex lawsuits that involve major government programs or initiatives. Many of their cases will proceed to the Alberta Court of Appeal and some will go to the Supreme Court of Canada.

"Members of the Litigation Group enjoy a highly stimulating and rewarding practice of law"

Are you up for the challenge?

The Litigation Group with Alberta Justice plays an essential role in representing the Alberta government.

- The range of work is extremely broad and can include almost any aspect of provincial life – human rights, health, environment, education, public works, alternative dispute resolution, to name a few.
- Members of the Litigation Group enjoy an opportunity to make a meaningful contribution to interesting and important cases, in an atmosphere supported by experienced and diverse senior counsel.
