Standards Council of Canada Awards

Awards Program

With over 350 member organizations and 15,000 participants, Canada's National Standards System is a model for the world. The persons and organizations who develop, implement and promote standards make up a whole system—the National Standards System (NSS). For more than 25 years, the NSS has helped to ensure the safety and performance of products and services, helped to open the global marketplace to Canadians, and made Canada a leader in international standardization.

The Standards Council of Canada (SCC) oversees the NSS in which some 15,000 individuals take part. Most of these individuals come from industry, government, non-governmental organizations or the general public. They participate in standards-development committees and also provide their expertise to accreditation programs and advisory committees.

Individual members and the organizations who support their work are of vital importance to the NSS and the SCC. The standardization process is a cost-effective and efficient one because of the volunteer nature of the system. In light of this, the SCC believes in recognizing its outstanding members and the organizations that contribute members to the NSS.

The SCC honours the notable achievements of its members through a series of SCC Awards that are presented to recipients at a special recognition ceremony. Anyone can nominate persons, committees or organizations for an SCC Award. Read on to find out how.

Overview of the Organization's Contributions:

The Overview of the Organization's Contributions is the nominator's opportunity to explain why this organization should receive the award for which it is being nominated. It should be no longer than 250 words in length. The following elements should be kept in mind when writing this overview:

- Contributions to the development, promotion or implementation of standards, or a combination of all three, including:
 - ◆ financial and human resource support in delivery of service in technical committee work or other standardization work;
 - ◆ demonstrated leadership in support of technical, administrative, or special committee activities in government, industry, standards organizations, consumer organizations; and/or
 - ◆ outstanding support or service that has particularly advanced the prestige of standardization.

- Notable contributions that have benefited Canadian standardization, either nationally or internationally;
- Approximate number of years over which their support service to the NSS extends; and
- Any other information considered relevant to this nomination.

Nominations will be reviewed and approved by the SCC's Member Program Committee. Recipients of the SCC Awards will be notified and presented with their awards at a special recognition ceremony. Nominations may be submitted on an ongoing basis.

For answers to questions about the nomination process or the eligibility of a potential nominee, please contact the Coordinator, Member Program via e-mail at members@scc.ca or by telephone at +1 613 238 3222.

Specific Awards Criteria

Jean P. Carrière Award:

The purpose of the Jean P. Carrière Award is to recognize notable contributions extending over a period of at least 10 years that have benefited Canadian standardization. Such contributions may be for the development, promotion or implementation of standards or for a combination of all three, through:

- service in technical committee work or other standardization work;
- leadership in technical, administrative, or special committee activities in government, industry, standards organizations, consumer organizations; and/or
- outstanding activity or service that has particularly advanced the prestige or standing of standardization.

Roy A. Phillips Award:

The purpose of the Roy A. Phillips Award is to recognize notable Canadian contributions extending over a period of at least 10 years that have benefited standardization internationally. Such contributions may be for the development, promotion or implementation of standards or for a combination of all three, through:

- specific service in technical committee work, sub-committee work, working groups, ad-hoc groups or other standardization work in the International Organization for Standardization (ISO) and/or the International Electrotechnical Commission (IEC) and/or a Joint Technical Committee (JTC);

- leadership in technical, administrative, or special committee activities in the International Organization for Standards (ISO) and/or the International Electrotechnical Commission (IEC) and/or the Joint Technical Committee (JTC 1); and/or
- outstanding activity or service that has particularly advanced the prestige or standing of standardization.

Corporate Commitment Award:

This award will be presented to the corporation, organization, or consumer group that has demonstrated leadership over a period of at least 3 years by assisting the Standards Council of Canada in the development of national and/or international standardization activities. Such contributions may be for on-going contributions and commitment, through their:

- willingness to provide individuals to serve on SCC's national and international committees;
- on-going sponsorship for SCC's members and their work on both national or international committees; and
- continued involvement with the SCC in promoting the National Standards System and its work.

Committee Awards

SCC Leadership Award:

The purpose of this award is to recognize notable contributions extending over a period of at least 3 years made by a Chair/Convenor that have benefited advisory committees, technical committees, sub-committees, working groups, task groups, ad-hoc groups and/or the National Standards System. The nominee must have demonstrated leadership, proven organizational and reporting skills, consensus achievements, and/or direct contribution to a standardization and/or conformity assessment activity.

SCC Award of Excellence:

The purpose of this award is to recognize notable contributions extending over a period of at least 3 years made by a committee member that have benefited advisory committees, technical committees, sub-committees, working groups, task groups, ad-hoc groups and/or the National Standards System. The nominee must have demonstrated initiative in managing and developing the process and/or solutions to the development or part thereof of a standard, consensus achievements, and/or direct contribution to a standardization and/or conformity assessment activity.

SCC Distinguished Service Award:

The purpose of this award is to recognize notable contributions extending over a period of at least 3 years made by a Committee Officer that have benefited advisory committees, technical committees, sub-committees, working groups, task groups, ad-hoc groups and/or the National Standards System. The nominee must have demonstrated proven organizational and reporting skills, timeliness in carrying out the duties and responsibilities of the work and/or direct contribution to a standardization and/or conformity assessment activity.

SCC Special Achievement Award:

The purpose of this award is to recognize notable contributions extending over a period of at least 3 years made by a Committee that have benefited Canada's international or national standardization and/or conformity assessment activities. Notable contributions include the development or the completion of a national or international standard or action.

McMahon Dedicated Service Award:

This award recognizes notable contributions made by a Standards Council of Canada staff member and/or contract employee. The nominee must have proven organizational and reporting skills; have demonstrated timeliness in carrying out the duties and responsibilities of their work; and/or have directly contributed to a standardization and/or conformity assessment activity. The nominee must also have exhibited proactive interaction with SCC's clients as well as an appropriate level of understanding and responsiveness to client needs.

This award is named in memory of Joseph Terrence McMahon (1965-2004). An esteemed member of the SCC staff, Mr. McMahon exhibited genuine concern and respect for others, a supportive nature and, a vast knowledge of standardization that engendered his contributions to the SCC and the National Standards System. The McMahon Dedicated Service Award has been conferred by the Standards Council of Canada since 2004 to individuals who have likewise distinguished themselves through their involvement and contributions to standardization.
