

Scholarships Available

This is a listing of few examples of scholarships that are available for Aboriginal students seeking post-secondary education. The list is not at all inclusive. There are plenty of places to look for information.

Some of the Internet sites that were useful in constructing this list were:

- The National Aboriginal Achievement Foundation: www.naaf.ca
- The Aboriginal Multi-Media Society: www.ammsa.com
- The Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada: www.aucc.ca

Keep in mind, you should not limit yourself to Aboriginal scholarship designations. There are numerous scholarships offered by companies and organizations that award financial aid, which may be applicable to you.

Be sure to contact the university that you are planning to attend and find out what is available there.

If you have a parent who works for a company, be sure to check if that company offers scholarships to employee dependents.

Some examples are:

Abitibi-Consolidated,
Bowater,
Domtar,
Tembec and Weyerhaeuser

Be sure to contact your First Nation or other Aboriginal organizations in your area because they may offer financial aid specific to members of your First Nation, region, or area of study.

Organizational Scholarships

There are several organizations across Canada that offer scholarships to students in science. There are some that specifically mention natural resources or forestry, but for the most part, they generally fall into the category of science. Some examples of such scholarships are listed below:
