considerable amount of information about us as individuals. For employees, the government has not only names and addresses, but dates of birth, social insurance number and often banking information, and health information. For the general public, the government holds our medical information, our tax information, driving records, and much, much more. We have to be able to depend on government to maintain the confidentiality of this personal information.

In a place like Nunavut, where communities are very small and often everyone in a community knows everyone else, and often everyone knows everyone's business, or at least they think they do, it is a far more difficult task to keep information private. In larger centres like Toronto or Calgary or Vancouver, a name is usually just a name; it is not normally the name of a friend, neighbour, or business rival. Not so in Nunavut.

Furthermore, information and communications technologies today make it easier and easier to share information and there is pressure in many cases to use information for purposes it was never intended. Care must be taken not to extend the use of information gathered primarily for one reason for other purposes without really considering all of the consequences.

Changing technologies and societal attitudes make the privacy provisions of the Act the more dynamic of the two purposes of the Act. World events, the lightning speed of the changing and improving technologies, and changing public perceptions as to the meaning of privacy make it more and more difficult to define when and how much privacy should be accorded to an individual. More to the point, the more technologies change, the Privacy Commissioner, to Rankin Inlet.

I would like to thank the community and people of Rankin Inlet for making us feel welcome this week, I think I know as many people here in Rankin Inlet as I know in Cambridge Bay, judging from the warm welcome I received at the airport and the last couple of days.

I strongly believe that information and privacy is a foundation of our government; we must be an open and accountable government and we must protect the privacy of our citizens.

I am very happy to read and listen to Ms. Keenan Bengts' report that we are making progress and moving forward in both of these respects. I think there are a lot of improvements being made, but I think that Nunavummiut would be very confident to know that progress is being made and that the government is...Ms. Keenan Bengts made a comment, a pleasant observation that the government is being more open and accountable as a positive corporate culture.

I think the standing committee has done a lot of tremendous work over the last few years that I've been an MLA and making sure that we have all of these meetings in communities throughout Nunavut to give people an opportunity to participate and see how the standing committees operate and interact with the Office of the Privacy and Information Commissioner.

I'm a little concerned to some degree that there's not a representative of the Government of Nunavut here tonight...oh, you're there? Okay, I apologize. I retract my statement.

anything, the public is entitled to know how the government spends its money. The money that government spends doesn't belong to the government, it belongs to the people.

There might be a case made out for confidentiality, but I would have to see that case. All else being equal, I think that I agree with my southern counterpart, as I say who recently issued a very strongly worded order that this kind of information should be made available.

Chairman: I like that guy already and I've never met him. Go ahead, Keith.

Mr. Peterson: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I thank Ms. Keenan Bengts for that information. A follow up question then: do you think the current legislation should be amended to give you more power under the Act to order the government to provide the information of what is requested? Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman: Thank you, Mr. Peterson. Ms. Keenan Bengts.

Ms. Keenan Bengts: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. One of the things I have learned in doing this job is to be careful of what you ask for. There are two models; one is the ombudsman model, which Nunavut, the Northwest Territories, and several other jurisdictions follow in terms of the role of the Information and Privacy Commissioners. The other model is giving the Information and Privacy Commissioner order power. Both systems have their benefits and drawbacks.

The fact of the matter is I have yet to receive such a request, so I haven't even had the opportunity to make a recommendation on that kind of issue as it
