DESIGNATION OF A PROPERTY AS A PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE BY A PERSONAL TRUST

Use this form for 2002 and later tax years to designate a property as a trust's principal residence. Also use it to calculate the capital gain for the year if the trust:

- · disposed of, or if we consider it to have disposed of, its principal residence or any part of it; or
- granted someone an option to buy the principal residence of the trust or any part of it.

If the trust disposed of, or if we consider it to have disposed of, a property for which the trust filed Form 94-115, Election to Report a Capital Gain on Property Owned by a Personal Trust at the End of February 22, 1994, use this form to calculate the capital gain if:

- the property was the trust's principal residence for 1994; or
- the trust is designating the property in this form as the trust's principal residence for any tax year.

If the trust designated the property as its principal residence and filed Form 94-115 for that property, the trust may be entitled to a reduction as a result of the capital gains election. To calculate this reduction, use Form T1079-WS, Principal Residence Worksheet. You can get this form from our Web site at www.cra.gc.ca or by calling 1-800-959-2221.

Attach one copy of this form to the T3 Trust Income Tax and Information Return for the year in which the disposition or deemed disposition of the property, or the granting of an option to acquire the property, occurred. A deemed disposition occurs when you are considered to have disposed of property, even though you did not sell it.

If the trust designated the property as its principal residence for all the years it owned the property, there is no capital gain.

General Information

To qualify as the principal residence for a tax year, the trust's property must be:

- a) a housing unit, a leasehold interest in a housing unit, or a share of the capital stock of a co-operative housing corporation that the trust acquired only for the right to inhabit a housing unit owned by the corporation;
- b) owned by the trust at any time in the tax year, jointly with another person or otherwise (this includes sole ownership, joint tenancy, tenancy-in-common, and co-ownership (for example, in Quebec));
- c) a housing unit ordinarily inhabited by a specified beneficiary of the trust or by the current or former spouse, the current or former common-law partner, or a child of a specified beneficiary at any time in the calendar year which has ended in the tax year of the trust; and
- d) designated as the trust's only principal residence for that tax year.

A person referred to in c) above cannot designate another housing unit or leasehold interest. An exception to this is the spouse or common-law partner of the specified beneficiary who, throughout the year, lived apart from the beneficiary and separated from the beneficiary according to a judicial separation or written separation agreement. Another exception is a child of the specified beneficiary who was married, in a common-law relationship, or aged 18 or older.

For a specified beneficiary who, throughout the year, was under 18, unmarried, and not in a common-law relationship, no other property can be designated by his or her mother, father, or any of his or her brothers or sisters unless they were 18 or over, married, or in a common-law relationship in the year.

If the trust has made, or is making an election under subsection 45(2) or 45(3) of the Income Tax Act, it can designate the property to be its principal residence for up to four more years, even though the housing unit was not ordinarily inhabited during those years by one of the persons mentioned above. If the trust meets certain conditions, the four-year limitation can be extended indefinitely for tax years in which the ordinarily inhabited rule was not met because the place of employment of either a specified beneficiary or the spouse or common-law partner of a specified beneficiary was relocated. For more information on these elections, see the Capital Gains guide.

If the trust distributed the property to a beneficiary on a subsection 107(2) rollover basis, in certain circumstances subsection 107(2.01) may allow the trust to elect to have disposed of the property at fair market value immediately before this distribution. This would allow the trust to use the principal residence exemption.

If a trust has distributed a property to a beneficiary on a subsection 107(2) rollover basis to satisfy all or any part of the beneficiary's capital interest in the trust, and if the beneficiary disposes of the property after May 9, 1985, to claim the principal residence exemption, the beneficiary is considered to have owned the property since the trust last acquired it. This deemed-ownership provision does not apply if a post-1971 spousal or common-law partner, joint spousal or common-law partner, or alter ego trust distributed the property to a person other than the relevant spouse, common-law partner, or settlor when the spouse, common-law partner, or settlor was alive or on the day that person died, if that day was after December 20, 1991.

For more information, see Interpretation Bulletin IT-120, Principal Residence, and the chapter called "Principal Residence" in the Capital Gains guide.

Definitions

Common-law partner – This applies to a person who is not your spouse (see below), with whom you are living in a conjugal relationship, and to whom at least one of the following situations applies. He or she:

- a) has been living with you in a conjugal relationship for at least 12 continuous months;
- b) is the parent of your child by birth or adoption; or
- c) has custody and control of your child (or had custody and control immediately before the child turned 19 years of age) and your child is wholly dependent on that person for support.

In addition, an individual immediately becomes your common-law partner if you previously lived together in a conjugal relationship for at least 12 continuous months and you have resumed living together in such a relationship. Under proposed changes, this condition will no longer exist. The effect of this proposed change is that a person (other than a person described in b) or c) above) will be your common-law partner only after your current relationship with that person has lasted at least 12 continuous months. This proposed change will apply to 2001 and later years.

Reference to "12 continuous months" in this definition includes any period that you were separated for less than 90 days because of a breakdown in the relationship.

Specified beneficiary – A specified beneficiary of a trust for the year is a beneficiary who had a beneficial interest in the trust for the calendar year which has ended in the tax year of the trust, and who ordinarily inhabited the housing unit or had a current or former spouse, a current or former common-law partner, or a child who ordinarily inhabited the housing unit in the calendar year which has ended in the tax year of the trust. If the housing unit was not ordinarily inhabited by a particular beneficiary of a personal trust or by that beneficiary's current or former spouse, current or former common-law partner, or child, that beneficiary can nevertheless still fall within the definition of a "specified beneficiary" of the trust for a particular tax year of the trust. This would be the case if, in the calendar year ending in the trust's tax year, that beneficiary had a beneficial interest in the trust and also the trust was entitled to designate the property as its principal residence for the year by reason of a subsection 45(2) or 45(3) election.

Spouse – This term applies only to a person who is legally married.
