Authors and Reviewers

The core research team is very grateful to the chapter authors and reviewers, without whom the project would not have been possible, and in particular to the chapter authors who stayed the course, fitting their knowledge of the topic with the requirements of the project and balancing this with the requirements of the reviewers¹. The authors' patience, dedication and hard work through the many chapter revisions are really appreciated.

The reviewers of the whole document provided feedback on the report as a whole and insights on how to make the report more useful for gender-relevant policy and programming. The core research team thanks them for their thoughtful feedback and suggestions. Similarly, the core research team thanks the chapter-specific reviewers for their topic-related comments and suggestions, and the other individuals and groups who provided feedback. Their contributions to the direction of the document in general and to the individual chapters were greatly appreciated.

External reviewers of the chapters provided comments/suggestions, which were provided to the author(s) for inclusion where feasible. Authors were not required to incorporate all of the reviewers' suggestions, but they were asked to provide a rationale for their decisions.

Participants in the External Consultation Workshop

Special thanks go to the women’s health experts who participated in the external consultation in October 2002. Approximately 65 women’s health experts participated in a day of discussion based on the first draft of the report and provided suggestions for improvement. The core research team wants to particularly thank Miriam Stewart and the Canadian Institutes for Health Research—Gender and Health Institute for funding this external consultation as well as those who gave formal presentations.
