

Special Occasion Permits

Do I need a permit to serve alcohol somewhere other than a commercial liquor establishment?

Special occasion permits are required for anyone serving alcohol at a special event such as a wedding, cabaret or fundraiser that is held in a location other than a private place. A permit is required regardless if alcohol is served free of charge or if it is sold.

What types of permits are available?

- A cost recovery permit authorizes the sale of alcohol at a price sufficient to recover the cost of the alcohol. These permits are available only for private family celebrations and events such as weddings or birthdays.
- A non-sale permit is for a private function where alcohol is served, but not sold. This permit is commonly used for staff parties, weddings, reunions and other family functions open to invited guests only.
- Community event permits are intended for the entire community and may be more than one day in duration. Examples include a homecoming, annual rodeo, annual fair or sports day.
- Sale permits are for functions held to raise funds for charitable, educational, religious or community service purposes. A sale permit can also be used for social functions open to members and invited guests of an organization.
- Annual permits are for organizations which hold regular meetings at the same time and location. They cannot be used for social functions unless the majority of members of the organization are 55 years of age or older. Both sale and non-sale annual permits are available.

Where can I get a permit?

Most permits can be purchased at any SLGA liquor store or franchise. While applications for community event permits can be completed at any SLGA liquor store, the permit must be approved through SLGA's head office in Regina. It's important to apply for these permits in advance of the function as it may take up to two weeks for processing.

How long does it take to get a permit?

It's important to apply for a permit well in advance of the function to allow time for processing. To be certain, a permit should be applied for at least two weeks before the event.

Where can I buy the alcohol for my event?

All alcohol served at the event must be purchased from a Saskatchewan liquor store, franchise or off-sale establishment. Spirits for these events may only be purchased from a liquor store or franchise. All receipts for purchased alcohol must be attached to the permit. "Bring Your Own" events are not permitted.

Can I serve homemade beer and/or wine?

No homemade alcohol of any kind is allowed at a function for which a special occasion permit is issued.

How do I know what and how much to buy?

Staff at any SLGA liquor store or franchise will be able to help you determine how much beer, wine and spirits should be purchased for your event.

What if I buy too much?

Permit holders can return unopened spirit and wine bottles and sealed beer and cooler cases for a full refund at the location where originally purchased. Product packaging cannot be damaged and the original receipt is required.

Besides alcohol, what else should I serve?

Food equivalent to a light meal and non-alcoholic beverages must be available for your guests. Fruit juices, pop, mocktails and non-alcoholic punches are proven favourites. High-starch and protein foods such as meats, cheeses, light dips and breads are good food choices. Snack foods, such as potato chips and pretzels, are not considered sufficient food.

Can minors attend my event?

Minors may attend non-sale and cost recovery type functions. They may also attend sale and community event functions if accompanied by a parent and only if the permit has been endorsed to authorize minors at the event. Minors are not allowed to consume beverage alcohol at any permitted event.

Permittees should request valid identification (such as SGI photo ID or other valid ID) to ensure service or consumption of beverage alcohol is limited to people who are 19 years or older.

How many people can I have at my event?

There are no limits to the number of guests allowed at a special occasion function. However, applications for events attended by 1,000 people or more must be approved by SLGA's head office as special conditions may apply. It is your responsibility to ensure that the premise where you are holding your function is large enough, according to local and provincial fire regulations, to accommodate all your guests.

Why do I have to pay a resale levy?

Anyone selling alcohol under a "sale" or "community event" permit will be charged a resale levy when they obtain a permit. This is in lieu of collecting tax from guests on the selling price of each drink.

What other responsibilities do I have?

You must follow The Alcohol and Gaming Regulation Act, 1997 and The Alcohol Control Regulations, 2002, as well as the specific terms and conditions that apply to your permit. The laws that apply to commercial liquor permittees, such as prohibiting service to minors and intoxicated people, also apply to holders of special occasion permits.

Permit holders operating under special occasion permits, that allow the sale of alcohol for profit, must keep all records for one year after the event. This includes all ledgers and records detailing transactions relating to the event, bank statements, cancelled cheques, deposit books and cheque stubs relating to the event bank account and all bills of sale, invoices, vouchers or receipts that support disbursements from the event proceeds.

Do I need insurance for my event?

You are not required to have liability insurance for your event. However, as the permit holder, you may be held liable should anyone at your event be injured. This includes during the event itself, as well as injuries that may occur after the event. For example, if a guest at the event becomes intoxicated and attempts to drive himself home, you may be held liable for any damages he causes to himself or other people.

Party Alcohol Liability Insurance is available from many Saskatchewan insurance brokers.

Are there any restrictions on what I can use the proceeds from my event for?

Third party businesses or individuals, such as concert promoters or facility owners, cannot share in the proceeds from the sale of alcohol at any liquor permitted event. Organizations can use proceeds from alcohol sales to pay for actual services rendered or goods purchased.
