

Income Supplements for Saskatchewan Families with Children

In Saskatchewan there are a number of income supplements programs available for low-income families with children.

The Canada Child Tax Benefit (including the National Child Benefit Supplement) is a monthly supplement paid to low-income families with children under 18 years of age. The amount of the payment is based on the number of children in the family and the family's net income as reported to Canada Revenue Agency in each tax year. Families receiving the National Child Benefit Supplement may also be eligible for supplementary health coverage under the Saskatchewan Family Health Benefits program.

The Saskatchewan Employment Supplement is a supplement for families who have income in excess of $125 per month from a job, farming, self-employment or from child or spousal support. The amount of the supplement is based on the number of children in the family and their age. The minimum supplement is $25 per month which increases as income increases to $1,005 per month. The supplement then levels off for incomes up to $1,305 per month at which point it slowly reduces. Families receiving the Saskatchewan Employment Supplement will automatically be eligible for Family Health Benefits.
