Now You Can Be Strategically Prepared

The new Hazard Prevention Program Regulations, forming part XIX of the Canada Occupational Health and Safety (COHS) Regulations, came into effect December 14, 2005.

These regulations are in accordance with Part II of the Canada Labour Code, which deals with the occupational health and safety. Its purpose is to prevent accidents and injury to health in workplaces of employers under federal jurisdiction.

The new Hazard Prevention Program Regulations cover requirements relating to hazard identification, assessment and control as well as the education of employees. They also introduce a requirement for employers to submit to the Ministry of Labour, at least every three years, a report evaluating the program's effectiveness.
