

Edward Burtynsky - Clip 16

Man and Nature

So... so that theme of trying to understand how we relate to the... the thing we call "nature" out there and how we've evolved that thing into the industries that we've built, I think is still one of the most compelling themes of our times, and how we deal with it will, I think, ultimately be the success or failure of our... of our... of our species.

And, so I see that the work is constantly building around that idea in trying, for me personally, to get a greater understanding of what we're doing to it, how we're doing it. So I'm building my own knowledge base of... of... of... of the world and how we use our resources by pursuing this body of work.

And to me it's... it's there for my own personal growth. So I'm always learning about... about things and that keeps me interested in the subject.

