

Keeping Children Safe on the Internet

CyberWise.ca

CyberWise.ca is an online source of information, learning activities, research and resources to promote the safe use of the Internet to youth, parents, teachers and youth workers.

This initiative is part of the Government of Canada's National Strategy for the Protection of Children from Sexual Exploitation on the Internet. Technological advances, including the Internet, have created new practices, but also new threats against Canada's youth. The CyberWise.ca website helps young Canadians to recognize these threats and learn how to protect themselves online.

As part of the National Strategy, Cybertip.ca handles tips from individuals across Canada reporting the online sexual exploitation of children.

Be Wise. Be Safe. Visit:
CyberWise.ca
and keep Canadian children safe online!

Whether you are a youth, parent, teacher or youth worker, CyberWise.ca has something for you:

- Threats and Tips — Learn how to counter the dangers on the Internet and become a savvy user.
- Technology — Discover what electronic communication tools sexual predators may use to contact young people.
- Resources — Find links to a wide array of international, federal, provincial and local resources and websites.
- Library — Read the latest information, research, reports, press releases and newspaper articles about online sexual exploitation of children.
- Legislation — Inform yourself about Canadian laws and amendments. You will understand the legal and judicial implications of the sexual exploitation of children on the Internet, and on law enforcement.
- Partners — Learn about international, public, private and not-for-profit partners who are contributing to the strategy, as well as other participants.
