

Jean-Claude Ménard

Chief Actuary, Office of the Chief Actuary

Jean-Claude Ménard joined the Office of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions (OSFI) as Chief Actuary in August 1999.

The Chief Actuary prepares the actuarial reports of the Canada Pension Plan, the Old Age Security, the Canada Student Loans Program, and pension and benefits plans for federal public servants, the Canadian Forces, the RCMP, federal judges and members of Parliament.

Between 1980 and 1999, Mr. Ménard was with the Quebec Pension Board, where he held progressively more senior roles, culminating in his appointment as Chief Actuary and Director of Valuation in 1995.

Since 2002, he has been vice-president of the Technical Commission of Statistical, Actuarial and Financial Studies of the International Social Security Association. From 1992 to 1994, he served as vice-chairman of an Examination Committee of the Society of Actuaries.

Mr. Ménard is a Fellow of the Society of Actuaries and the Canadian Institute of Actuaries since 1985 and is a member of the Quebec Actuarial Club. He earned a Bachelor of Science degree in Actuarial Sciences from Université Laval.

Office of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions (OSFI)

Created in 1987 by an Act of Parliament, the Office of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions (OSFI) is the primary regulator and supervisor of federally registered deposit-taking institutions, insurance companies, and federally registered private pension plans. OSFI's mandate is to advance and administer a regulatory framework that contributes to public confidence in a strong, stable and competitive financial system.
