

Michael Semak - Clip 7

People as Subjects

I always said, "You'll never be bored with people." And that's my saying ...and it's true. They can be great, they could be compassionate, they could be warm, and they could be idiots. They can cut you off on the highway, and they can give you the finger, and they're capable of dropping a bomb on your head, or they're capable of giving birth to a baby. So, people are everything... I'll approach them as an individual. There's something about... I'm attracted to. And then from there, they will end up as a vehicle for my ideas. And then I will seek out something universal. So if I approach a Johnny or a Susie, they will not end up as a Johnny or a Susie. They will be all Johnnies and all Susies. But I have to know them first as an individual, which they are, which they are.

