

Racine - Clip 1

I dedicate my life to creation

At the age of 15, I really decided to dedicate my life to creativity. The word 'artist' did not occur to me. I started to write and compose music when I was 15 or 16, and at that time I told myself that I wanted to do this for the rest of my life. I didn't know if it would work out, or what would happen. I used to be very athletic and was never at school. I didn't like school: I didn't read or write or do anything like that at all. When I discovered music, I read the biographies of musicians and I said to myself that I wanted a life where I could create things.
