I am trying to understand how things are constructed

Besides the beauty of the work, I try to achieve which is a pure, which is already something, I think, but it's also like to understand how it comes together, how it is constructed, how much we need to kind of trust what we see but without really seeing the truth. So in my pictures, you could see a cup and you know it is not a cup because it is not what you think but it's enough to be a cup and be believable as an object, as a replacement object or something like that and that's what I'm exploring I think.
