

What challenges do you face as an artist?

Joe Fafard – Clip 5

To always continue and to reinvent myself, to always try to arrive at something that is going to interest me. To not rest on my laurels, but face the challenges of the future. At one point, I don't know if it's true, but we may have less energy, we may be less enthusiastic about our work than we were earlier. It may always be a challenge for all artists, but after we've done a certain number of things for years, we want to find something else, rather than repeating ourselves. The main challenge is to follow one's curiosity, I think.

