

Robert Fones - Clip 1

Repeated themes in my work

I would say there is maybe four or five main themes that I seem to go back to again and again and that crop up repeatedly in my work. One of them would be industrial production, one would be distribution of natural species and also of manufactured objects. Another would be cartography, map making and I guess a kind of interest in pictorial ambiguity, in the basic contradiction in painting and any rate of creating a three-dimensional space on a two-dimensional plane, that's something I have always been intrigued with.

