

Do you have to complete this form?

Complete this form if you have not previously given an Alberta TD1AB form to your employer or payer, or if there has been a change in your entitlement to personal tax credits, and you are an employee working in Alberta or a pensioner residing in Alberta.

If you complete this form, base it on the best estimate of your circumstances. Be sure to sign and date it on the back page, and give it to your employer or payer. Your employer or payer will use both this form and your most recent federal TD1 form to determine the amount of your tax deductions.

── Why is there an Alberta TD1AB form?
Your employer or payer uses the personal tax credit amounts you claim on your TD1AB form to calculate how much provincial tax to deduct from each payment.
— Total income less than total claim amount
Will your total income for the year from all employers and payers be less than your total claim amount on line 12? Yes No If yes , your employer or payer will not deduct tax from your earnings.
— Addition to or reduction of tax deductions
If you wish to have more tax deducted , complete the section called "Additional tax to be deducted" on the federal TD1 form.  You can ask to have less tax deducted if on your income tax return you are eligible for deductions or non-refundable tax credits that are not listed on this form. To make this request, complete Form T1213, Request To Reduce Tax Deductions At Source , to get a letter of authority from your tax services office. Give the letter of authority to your employer or payer. You do not need a letter of authority if your employer deducts Registered Retirement Savings Plan (RRSP) contributions from your salary.
Income from other employers or payers
If you have more than one employer or payer at the same time and you have already claimed personal tax credit amounts on another Form TD1AB for 2007, you can choose not to claim them again. By doing this, you may not have to pay as much tax when you file your income tax return. To choose this option, enter "0" on line 12 on the front page and do not complete lines 2 to 11.
