About the Advisory Council

The Nova Scotia Advisory Council on the Status of Women was established by provincial statute in 1977. The Council's mandate under the Advisory Council on the Status of Women Act is to advise the Minister Responsible for the Status of Women and to bring forward the concerns of women in Nova Scotia.

The Council's work touches on all areas of women's lives, including...

- | | |
|----------------|------------------------|
| ♀ family life | ♀ health |
| ♀ economics | ♀ education |
| ♀ legal rights | ♀ paid and unpaid work |
| ♀ sexuality | ♀ violence |

Council pays close attention to the experiences of women who face barriers to full equality because of race, age, language, class, ethnicity, religion, ableness, sexual orientation, or various forms of family status.

We are committed to voicing women's concerns to government and the community through policy research, information services and community liaison. Working cooperatively with women and equality-seeking organizations, our mission is to advance equality, fairness and dignity for all women.

Introduction

This profile pulls together in one document the statistics that exist on sexual assault in Nova Scotia. The profile begins by outlining our current knowledge about the prevalence of sexual assault in the population, based on the findings of a recently published Canadian survey on victimization. The remainder of the report focuses on our existing knowledge of police-reported sexual assaults and how these crimes are dealt with by police and the courts in Nova Scotia. In both cases, the statistics paint a disturbing picture about the personal safety and well-being of women in this province.

According to the General Social Survey (GSS), Nova Scotia's rate of sexual assault was 40 per 1,000 population aged 15 and over in 2004. This rate was not significantly different from the national rate of 21 per 1,000 population. However, while the national rate remained unchanged from 1999 to 2004, Nova Scotia's rate increased significantly.

The GSS showed that the vast majority of sexual assault victims are female, while more than 90 percent of accused are male. Most victims of sexual assault are young, with close to half being under the age of 25.

A particularly striking finding from this survey is that the vast majority of victims of sexual assault do not report the crime to police. Even when compared to other forms of violent victimization, sexual assaults are much less likely to be reported to police. In 2004, only 8 percent of Canadians who indicated having been sexually assaulted in the past 12 months reported the incident to police, compared to 39 percent of those who were physically assaulted and 46 percent of those who were victims of robbery.

When we examine statistics on the very small proportion of sexual assaults that do get reported to police in Nova Scotia, we are able to get a sense of how these types of crimes are addressed by the justice system, especially when we compare sexual assaults to other reported violent crimes. We know, for instance, that the 886 sexual offences reported to Nova Scotian police in 2004 made up 8 percent of all reported violent offences.

The rate of police-reported sexual assault has changed considerably over time. With major changes in sexual assault legislation in the early 1980s, came a sharp and steady increase in reporting to police, peaking in 1992 and declining substantially since. In 2004, the rate of police-reported sexual assault in Nova Scotia was 88 per 100,000 population.

When we examine court responses to sexual assaults over time, several trends clearly emerge:

- ▶ The proportion of sexual assault cases that result in the laying of a charge against the accused has declined substantially in the last decade. This is not the case for other violent offences. The proportion of sexual assaults that result in the laying of a charge is lower in Nova Scotia than in any other province in Canada, except PEI.
- ▶ Clearance rates for sexual assaults have also declined substantially but have increased slightly for other violent offences.
- ▶ Acquittal rates for sexual assaults have risen substantially for adult offenders and slightly for young offenders in the last decade but have remained steady for other violent offences.
- ▶ There has been a significant decline in the proportion of prison sentences given to adult offenders convicted of sexual assault in the past decade, while the proportion of prison sentences given to those convicted of other violent offences has remained relatively stable.
- ▶ Conditional sentences are much more likely to be given in cases of sexual assault than for other violent offences.

An examination of police-reported rates of sexual assault at the regional level also shows some clear differences. Rates of police-reported sexual assault are highest in Cape Breton and lowest in the Valley region of the province. There are also dramatic differences in the proportion of sexual assaults that result in the laying of a charge against the accused. In 2004, Halifax Regional Municipality (HRM), at 19 percent, had the lowest proportion, while 65 percent of sexual assaults reported in the South West region of the province resulted in the laying of a charge. Not surprisingly, HRM's clearance rate for sexual assaults in 2004 was also the lowest in the province, at 28 percent.

These statistics only begin to give us a picture of sexual assault in this province. What is clear is that the high incidence of sexual assault in Nova Scotia, combined with a declining police and court response to sexual offences, leaves women in this province in a position of vulnerability.

What We Know About Sexual Assault in the Population:

Nova Scotia's Sexual Assault Rate is Not Significantly Different from the National Average

Sexual Assault Rate per 1,000 Population Aged 15+
Canada and Provinces, 2004

A recently-released report on criminal victimization in Canada indicated that, in 2004, Nova Scotia had a sexual assault rate of 40 per 1,000 population aged 15 and over.

Figure 1.

While Nova Scotia's sexual assault rate appears to be higher than that of other provinces and higher than the national rate, none of these differences are statistically significant except for the difference between Nova Scotia's rate (40) and Québec's (11).¹

Though the national rate of sexual assault remained virtually unchanged from 1999 to 2004, two provinces, Nova Scotia and Manitoba, experienced statistically significant increases in their rates of sexual assault over this five-year period. British Columbia was the only province to show a decline in its rate of sexual assault, while all other provinces' rates remained unchanged.²

There is no other information available from the victimization survey about sexual assault at the provincial level. However, a number of findings are available at the national level. These include:

- ▶ The rate of sexual assault for women was five times higher than the rate for men (35 per 1,000 women versus 7 per 1,000 men) – 84 percent of those who indicated they had been sexually assaulted in the past 12 months were women, while 16 percent were men

- ▶ Most victims of sexual assault are young – 44 percent of those who had experienced sexual assault were aged 15-24, another 24 percent were aged 25-34, and another 19 percent were aged 35-44
- ▶ 86 percent of victims indicated that they lived in urban rather than rural areas
- ▶ More than half of victims (56 percent) reported that they engaged in 30 or more evening activities per month
- ▶ In 91 percent of sexual assault incidents, the accused was male
- ▶ In more than half of incidents (54 percent), the accused was aged 18-34¹

Proportion of Violent Crimes that are Reported to Police Canada, 2004

What is also known about sexual assault from victimization surveys is that the vast majority of such incidents do not get reported to police. In comparison to other types of violent victimization, victims of sexual assault are much less likely to report the crime to police.

Figure 2.

In 2004, only 8 percent of Canadians who indicated having been sexually assaulted in the past 12 months reported the incident to police compared to 39 percent of those who were physically assaulted and 46 percent of those who were victims of robbery.

Sexual Assaults Reported to Police in Nova Scotia

Distribution of Violent Offences Reported to Police
Nova Scotia, 2004

In 2004, 886 incidents involving sexual offences were reported to police in Nova Scotia. Sexual offences comprised 8 percent of all violent offences reported to police in the province.

Figure 3.

Reported Sexual Offences by Type
Nova Scotia, 2004

The vast majority (91 percent) of sexual offences reported to police in Nova Scotia in 2004 were level 1 sexual assaults while 7.4 percent of these offences fell into the "other sexual offence" category. Less than 2 percent of reported sexual offences were categorized as level 2 or level 3 sexual assaults.

Figure 4.

Rates of Police-Reported Sexual Assaults Nova Scotia, 1983-2004

Rates of police-reported sexual assaults in Nova Scotia rose dramatically in the early 1980s, corresponding to changes in legislation. Rates peaked in 1992 at 149 per 100,000 population and have declined substantially since. By 2004, the rate of police-reported sexual assaults had declined to 88 per 100,000 population.

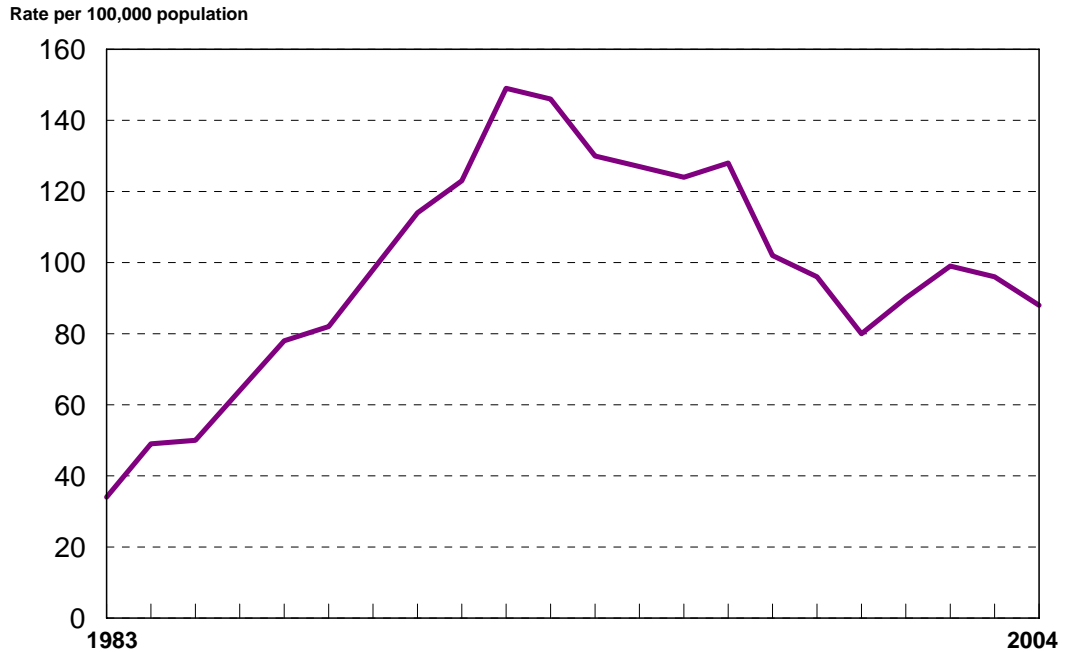

Figure 5.

Rates of Police-Reported Sexual Assaults Canada, Provinces and Territories, 2004

Rate per 100,000 population

While Nova Scotia's rate of reported sexual assaults in 2004 was not the highest in the country, at 88 per 100,000 population, this province's rate was higher than the national rate of 74 per 100,000 population.

Figure 6.

In 2004, 85 percent of victims of all sexual offences reported to the Halifax Regional Police Service were female and 15 percent were male. In close to half of cases (49 percent), victims (female and male) were under the age of 18.

Victim-Suspect Relationship for Sexual Offences Reported to the Halifax Regional Police Service, 2004

In close to 70 percent of cases reported to the Halifax Regional Police Service in 2004, victims of sexual offences knew the accused. Thirty-two percent of victims were sexually assaulted by strangers.³

Figure 7.

Sexual Assault and the Criminal Justice System

Of the 820 sexual assaults reported to police in Nova Scotia in 2004, charges were laid in 250 cases (31 percent). Another 89 cases (11 percent) were cleared otherwise⁴ and the remaining 481 incidents (59 percent) were not cleared. In the same year, other types of violent offences reported to police were cleared by the laying of a charge in 43 percent of cases, while 22 percent were cleared otherwise and 36 percent remained not cleared.

Percentage of Sexual Assaults and Other Violent Offences⁵ Where Charge is Laid

Figure 8.

Between 1993 and 2004, the proportion of sexual assaults where a charge was laid declined from 56% to 31%. In comparison, the proportion of other violent offences that resulted in the laying of a charge remained relatively stable.

Percentage of Sexual Assaults Where Charge is Laid Canada, Provinces and Territories, 2004

The proportion of sexual assaults that result in the laying of a charge in Nova Scotia (31 percent) is lower than in all other Canadian provinces and territories, with the exception of Prince Edward Island.

Figure 9.

Clearance Rates for Sexual Assaults and Other Violent Offences Nova Scotia, 1993-2004

Clearance rates⁶ for sexual assaults in Nova Scotia have declined while clearance rates for other violent offences have shown a slight upward trend over the last decade. In 2004, the clearance rate for sexual assaults was 41 percent while for other violent offences it was 64 percent.

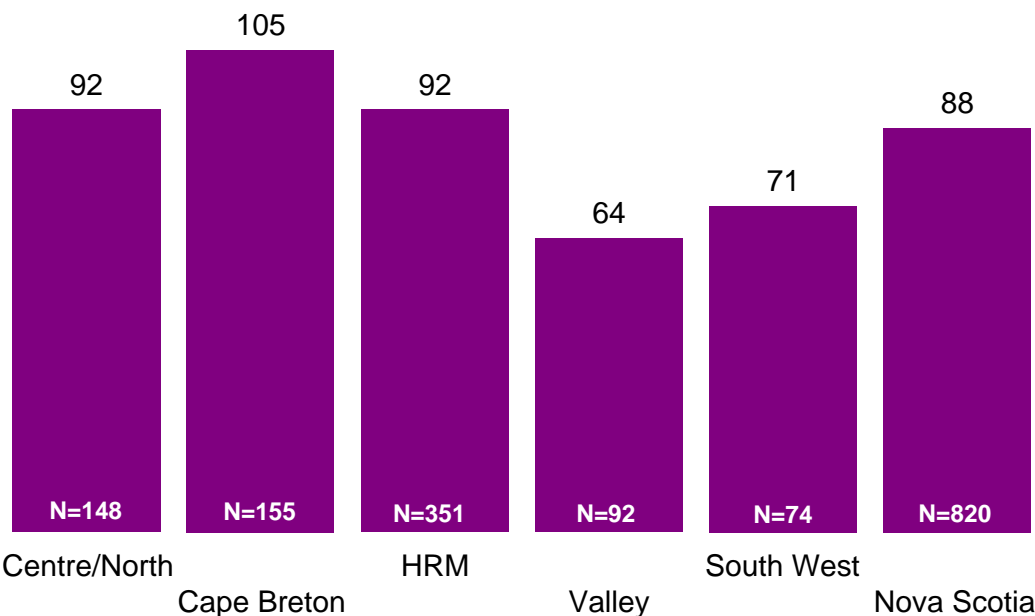

Figure 10.

A Look at the Regions

Rates of Police-Reported Sexual Assaults Nova Scotia and Regions, 2004

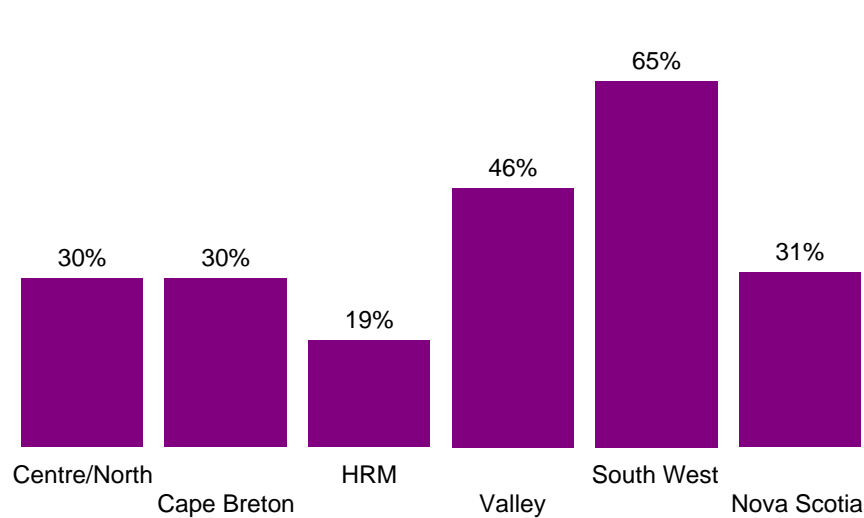

Rate per 100,000 population

There are differences in the rate of sexual assault depending on the region of the province, with Cape Breton having the highest (105 per 100,000 population) and the Valley having the lowest (64 per 100,000 population) in 2004.

Figure 11.

Percentage of Reported Sexual Assaults Where Charge is Laid
Nova Scotia and Regions, 2004

There are also evident differences in the proportions of reported sexual assaults that result in the laying of a charge, depending on the region of the province. HRM, at 19 percent, has the lowest proportion of sexual assaults that are cleared through the laying of a charge against the accused. The South West region of the province has the highest proportion charged at 65 percent.

Figure 12.

Clearance Rates for Reported Sexual Assaults
Nova Scotia and Regions, 2004

HRM has the lowest clearance rates in the province at 28 percent, while the South West region of the province has the highest at 77 percent.

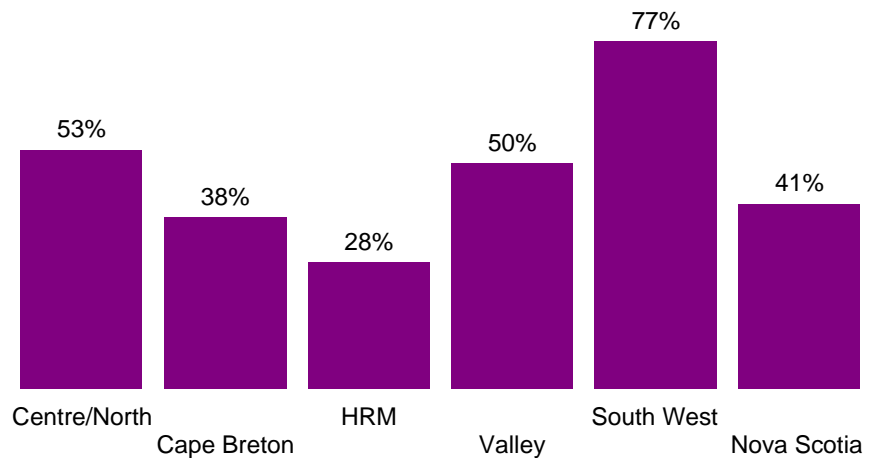

Figure 13.

Sexual Assault and the Courts – Adult Court Decisions

Conviction Rates for Sexual Assaults and Other Violent Offences Nova Scotia - Adult Court, 1994/95 to 2003-04

Conviction rates⁷ for adults have declined for all violent offences over the past decade. However, conviction rates are lower for sexual assaults than they are for other violent offences. In 2003/04, the conviction rate for sexual assaults in Nova Scotia was 22 percent. In comparison, the conviction rate for other violent offences was 38 percent.⁸

Figure 14.

Acquittal Rates for Sexual Assaults and Other Violent Offences Nova Scotia - Adult Court, 1994/95 to 2003-04

While acquittal rates for sexual assaults have shown a significant upward trend over the past decade, acquittal rates for other violent offences have remained relatively stable. In 2003/04, the acquittal rate for reported sexual assaults in Nova Scotia was 23 percent. In comparison, the acquittal rate for other violent offences was only 8 percent.

Figure 15.

Sexual Assault and the Courts – Youth Court Decisions⁹

Conviction Rates for Sexual Assaults and Other Violent Offences Nova Scotia - Youth Court, 1991/92 to 2002-03

Conviction rates for young offenders have also declined for all violent offences over the past decade. However, as is the case for adult offenders, conviction rates of young offenders are lower for sexual assaults than they are for other violent offences.

Figure 16.

Acquittal Rates for Sexual Assaults and Other Violent Offences Nova Scotia - Youth Court, 1991/92 to 2002-03

Youth Court acquittal rates for sexual assault have also shown a slight upward trend over the past decade. Acquittal rates for other violent offences, on the other hand, have remained relatively stable during the same period. In 2002/03, the acquittal rate (i.e., of young offenders) for sexual assaults in Nova Scotia was 12 percent while for other violent offences it was only four percent.

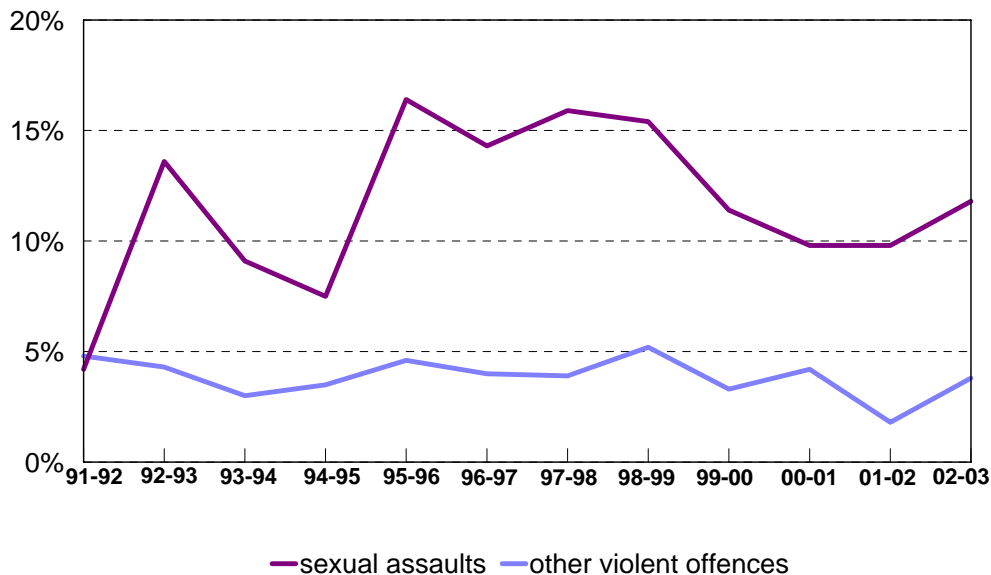

Figure 17.

Sentencing of Sexual Assault – Adult Court

Sentencing for Sexual Assaults and Other Violent Offences
Nova Scotia - Adult Court, 1994/95 to 2003/04
Prison

There has been a significant decline in the proportion of prison sentences given to adult offenders convicted of sexual assault over the past decade. Between 1994/95 and 2003/04, the proportion of prison sentences given for sexual assaults declined from 60 percent to 36 percent, while the proportion of prison sentences given to those convicted of other violent offences remained relatively stable.

Figure 18.

Sentencing for Sexual Assaults and Other Violent Offences – Probation
Nova Scotia - Adult Court, 1994/95 to 2003-04

In Nova Scotian adult courts over the past decade, probation has typically been given more frequently as a sentence for other violent offences than it has been for sexual assaults. For both sexual assaults and other violent offences, there has been a slight increase over time in the proportion of cases given probation.

Figure 19.

Sentencing for Sexual Assaults and Other Violent Offences
Nova Scotia - Adult Court, 1999/2000 to 2003-04
Conditional Sentence

Conditional sentences are much more frequently given in cases of sexual assault and other sexual offences than they are for other violent offences in Nova Scotian adult courts. In 2003/04, conditional sentences were given to 21 percent of those convicted of sexual assault compared to only 6 percent of those convicted of other violent offences in the province.

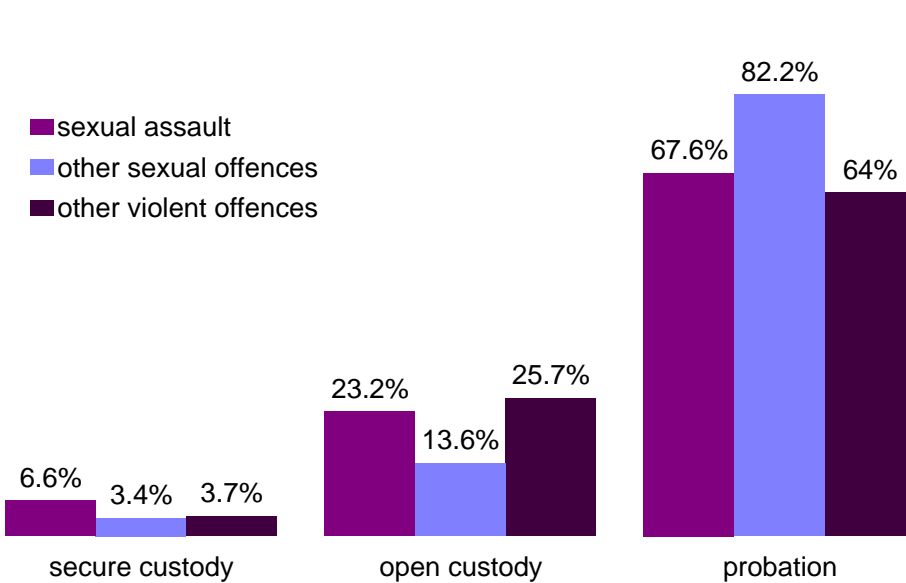

Figure 21.

Overall, young offenders who are convicted of sexual assault are more frequently given secure custody sentences than are young offenders convicted of other sexual offences or other violent offences. Young offenders convicted of other sexual offences are less likely to receive open custody and more likely to receive probation.

Appendix A

Sexual Offences as defined by the *Criminal Code of Canada*¹¹

There are three levels of sexual assault defined by the Criminal Code of Canada.

Sexual assault level 1 (s.271) -- an assault committed in circumstances of a sexual nature such that the sexual integrity of the victim is violated. Level 1 involves minor physical injuries or no injuries to the victim. This is a hybrid offence and may be processed as an indictable offence (with a maximum sentence of 10 years imprisonment) or by way of summary conviction (with a maximum sentence of 18 months imprisonment or $2,000 fine).¹²

Sexual assault level 2 (s.272) -- sexual assault with a weapon, threats, or causing bodily harm. Level 2 is an indictable offence carrying a maximum sentence of 14 years imprisonment. A mandatory minimum sentence of four years in prison is imposed if a firearm is used.

Aggravated sexual assault - level 3 (s.273) -- sexual assault that results in wounding, maiming, disfiguring or endangering the life of the victim. Level 3 is an indictable offence carrying a maximum sentence of life imprisonment. A mandatory minimum sentence of four years in prison is imposed if a firearm is used.

The term other sexual offences includes a group of offences that are meant primarily to address incidents of sexual abuse directed at children. The Criminal Code offences included in this category are:

Sexual interference (s.151) -- the direct or indirect touching (for a sexual purpose) of a person under the age of 14 years using a part of the body or an object. This is a hybrid offence and may be processed as an indictable offence (with a maximum sentence of 10 years imprisonment) or by way of summary conviction.

Invitation to sexual touching (s.152) -- inviting, counseling or inciting a person under the age of 14 years to touch (for a sexual purpose) the body of any person directly or indirectly with a part of the body or with an object. This is a hybrid offence and may be processed as an indictable offence (with a maximum sentence of 10 years imprisonment) or by way of summary conviction.

Sexual exploitation (s.153) -- a person in a position of trust or authority towards a young person or a person with whom the young person is in a relationship of dependency, commits sexual interference or invitation to sexual touching. "Young person" refers to a person between 14 and 18 years of age. This is a hybrid offence and may be processed as an indictable offence (with a maximum sentence of five years imprisonment) or by way of summary conviction.

Incest (s.155) -- sexual intercourse with a person that has a known defined blood relationship with them. This is an indictable offence carrying a maximum sentence of 14 years imprisonment.

Anal intercourse (s.159) - with the exception of married couples and other persons over the age of 18 who consent and who engage in these acts in private. This is a hybrid offence and may be processed as an indictable offence (with a maximum sentence of 10 years imprisonment) or by way of summary conviction.

Bestiality (s.160) - anyone who commits or compels another person to commit bestiality is guilty of a hybrid offence which may be processed as an indictable offence (with a maximum sentence of 10 years imprisonment) or by way of summary conviction.

- ² Information pertaining to the statistical significance of provincial differences in rates of sexual assault was obtained through personal communication with Karen Mihorean, Chief, Integration and Analysis, Canadian Centre for Justice Statistics, Statistics Canada, December 12, 2005.
- ³ Stranger is defined by the Incident-Based Uniform Crime Reporting Survey as someone who is not known to the victim in any way but has been observed. Halifax Regional Police sources indicate that they include in this category persons known to the victim for less than 24 hours.
- ⁴ Cleared otherwise means that the accused was identified but was not charged for a variety of reasons. These may include cases where the complainant requests that charges not be laid against the accused, the accused has died, the accused has diplomatic immunity, the accused is referred to a diversionary program, police discretion, or for a reason beyond the control of the police.
- ⁵ Other violent offences include the full range of crimes of violence under the Criminal Code of Canada (eg., homicide, attempted murder, assault (three levels), abduction, and robbery). In figures above which compare sexual assault statistics to those for “other violent offences,” the latter do not include either sexual assaults or other sexual offences.
- ⁶ The clearance rate refers to the proportion of incidents that are cleared either through the laying of a charge or cleared otherwise (see note 5 above for definition of “cleared otherwise”).
- ⁷ Conviction rate refers to the proportion of total cases with a finding of guilt.
- ⁸ See Tables 1-4 in Appendix B for more detailed information about sexual assault case decisions and sentencing for adult and youth courts in Nova Scotia.
- ⁹ The Youth Court Survey collects data from Youth Courts on persons aged 12-17 (at the time of the offence).
- ¹⁰ Because of relatively small numbers, there is a large amount of variability in sentencing of young offenders in cases of sexual assault and other sexual offences when statistics are examined on a single-year basis. For this reason, sentencing statistics in this section span the entire period from 1991/92 to 2002/03. For detailed statistics on sexual assault sentencing in Youth Courts, see Table 4 in Appendix B.

¹² A hybrid offence may be processed as either a summary or indictable offence. Except where otherwise stated by law, the maximum penalty for a summary conviction is a fine not exceeding $2,000 or imprisonment for six months or both.

¹³ Found guilty includes guilty (convicted) of the charged offence, of an attempt of the charged offence, or of an attempt of an included offence. This category also includes cases where an individual has been found guilty but was given an absolute or conditional discharge. Source: Statistics Canada, catalogue no. 85-002-XPE, vol. 24, no.12.

¹⁴ Acquittal means that the accused has been found not guilty of the charges presented before the court. Source: Statistics Canada, catalogue no. 85-002-XPE, vol. 24, no.12.

¹⁵ Stay or Withdrawn includes stay of proceedings, withdrawn, dismissed and discharged at preliminary inquiry. These decisions all refer to the court stopping or interrupting criminal proceedings against the accused. Source: Statistics Canada, catalogue no. 85-002-XPE, vol. 24, no.12.

¹⁶ Other decisions include final decisions of found not criminally responsible, waived in province, and waived out of province. This category also includes any order where a conviction was not recorded, the court's acceptance of a special plea, cases which raise Charter arguments, and cases where the accused was found unfit to stand trial. In Nova Scotia and other jurisdictions that do not provide superior court data, the "other" decision category includes charges having a committal for trial in superior court as the decision on the final appearance in provincial court. Source: Statistics Canada, catalogue no. 85-002-XPE, vol. 24, no.12.

¹⁸ Conditional Sentence: The Sentencing Reform Bill C-41 was enacted in 1996 establishing a new, community-based conditional sentencing option as an alternative to incarceration. With a conditional sentence of imprisonment, the execution of the prison sentence is suspended. In terms of seriousness, it is less serious than prison but more serious than a term of probation. Like probation, conditional sentences are served in the community under supervision and often include a number of conditions restricting the movement and activities of the offender. Unlike probation, however, violation of a condition of a conditional sentence can result in immediate suspension and imprisonment of the offender. Source: Statistics Canada, catalogue no. 85-002-XPE, vol. 24, no.12.

¹⁹ Probation: An offender sentenced to a term of probation remains in the community but is subject to a number of conditions for the duration of the probation order. Some conditions are compulsory and apply to all offenders on probation. These include keeping the peace and appearing before the court when required to do so. The optional conditions vary from case to case, and can include performing community service, abstaining from the consumption of alcohol and attending treatment. Violating the conditions of a probation order is a criminal offence subject to possible prosecution that could result in a maximum sentence of imprisonment of two years. Probation is mandatory in cases where the accused is given a conditional discharge or a suspended sentence. Source: Statistics Canada, catalogue no. 85-002-XPE, vol. 24, no.12.

²⁰ Fine: When a fine is imposed, the offender is ordered to pay a specific dollar amount to the court. Unless the offender has been found guilty of an offence carrying a minimum term of imprisonment, or a maximum penalty of more than five years, an offender may be fined in lieu of other types of punishment. Source: Statistics Canada, catalogue no. 85-002-XPE, vol. 24, no.12.

²¹ Other types of sanctions: In addition to these principal sentencing options, the courts can choose a variety of other sentencing options, such as restitution, compensation, or an absolute discharge. Source: Statistics Canada, catalogue no. 85-002-XPE, vol. 24, no.12.

²² Stay involves a stay of proceedings, where a charge or charges are suspended, and the Crown may recommence court proceedings at a later date, within one year. Source: Statistics Canada, catalogue no. 85-002-XPE, vol. 25, no.4.

²³ Withdrawn or dismissed refer to cases where all charges were withdrawn by the Crown (prior to entering of a plea by the accused) or dismissed by the court. These decisions all refer to the court stopping or interrupting criminal proceedings against the accused. Source: Statistics Canada, catalogue no. 85-002-XPE, vol. 25, no.4.

²⁴ Other decisions include cases that were transferred to adult court (under the Young Offenders Act), transferred to another jurisdiction, the accused was found to be unfit to stand trial, or not criminally responsible due to mental disorder. Source: Statistics Canada, catalogue no. 85-002-XPE, vol. 25, no.4.

²⁵ Secure custody: Sentences to secure custody mean the youth serves his or her sentence in youth facility which provides secure containment or restraint of young persons. Source: Statistics Canada, catalogue no. 85-002-XPE, vol. 24, no.2.

²⁶ Open custody: Sentences to open custody mean the youth serves his or her sentence in a group homes or community residential facilities where the youth can have some interaction with the community. Source: Statistics Canada, catalogue no. 85-002-XPE, vol. 24, no.2.

²⁷ Probation: A young person sentenced to a term of probation remains in the community but is subject to a number of conditions for the duration of the probation order. Some conditions are compulsory and apply to all youth on probation. These include keeping the peace and appearing before the court when required to do so. The optional conditions vary from case to case, and can include a curfew, reporting to a probation officer, and attending school. The maximum length for a probation order is two years. Source: Statistics Canada, catalogue no. 85-002-XPE, vol. 25, no.4.

²⁸ Fine: When a fine is imposed, the young person is ordered to pay a specific dollar amount to the court. The maximum amount that a youth can be fined is $1,000. Source: Statistics Canada, catalogue no. 85-002-XPE, vol. 25, no.4.

²⁹ Other sanctions: In addition, the courts can choose a variety of other sentencing options including compensation for damages, restitution, compensation of an innocent purchaser, personal service, prohibition, seizure, or forfeiture, conditional discharge, or absolute discharge. Source: Statistics Canada, catalogue no. 85-002-XPE, vol. 25, no.4.
