One of a series of info sheets published by the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources

April 2007

This info sheet has been prepared to explain how the Yukon government's access to information process applies to your land or land use application file and any subsequent land tenure or land use permit files.

Are my application files open to the public?

Yes, the review of land and land use applications is a public process. Information submitted is distributed for review as part of the decision-making process. The "public" portion of your file includes your application form and all associated supporting documents (copy of title, tax payment, accompanying letters, etc.).

Also, all written comments that are received on new land or land use applications are part of the public record. Environmental screening reports and subsequent decisions on the file are also public.

The general guideline is that all information associated with the review and resulting decision is public and can be provided to anyone upon request.

Is my address protected?

No, the whole application including your address is forwarded to the review agencies and other consultation parties and is accessible to the public.

Can I see everything on my file?

Yes, you can request to view or receive copies of all information on your file. Your request should be made in writing. You will also receive copies of all documents presented by any intervener or agency on your application during the review.

What portions of my application can I request not be distributed to the public?

You have a right to request that portions of the application that relate to business interests be withheld from the public record. Under the Access to Information and Protection of Privacy Act (ATIPPA), any information that could cause financial harm, prejudice your competitive position or interfere with contractual negotiations can be withheld from the public. A decision will be made on your request and you will be advised what information, if any, will be treated as confidential.

It is the responsibility of the Lands Branch to ensure that a file is reviewed for any confidential information, prior to release to third parties.

Is there a charge for copies of file information?

Normal practice is for small amounts of photocopying to be made available without charge. However, you could be charged for copies, depending upon the amount of material that is being requested.

Is my agreement for sale, lease and land use permit or other legal interest available to the public?

Yes. The Lands Branch maintains a public electronic registry of all registered interests in land, encumbrances on land, land use permits and lands available for sale.

Copies of the actual documents can be made available upon request to any interested person. This includes copies of all documents including land use permits, agreements for sale, leases, licence of occupations, easements, rights of way, caveats, restrictive covenants, notifications and transfers in a file.

Copies of all title documents and registered interests are available from the public registry at the Land Titles Office.

What about the rest of my file?

A third party may apply through the Access to Information and Protection of Privacy Act (ATIPP) process to see other parts of your file, such as payment records, letters, etc. Releasing information other than the public registry information requires notifying you as the affected person.

You can also provide consent, in writing, for another person to view your file. This often happens in sale or assignment situations.
