

Nova Scotia Senior Citizens' Secretariat

Business Plan

2004-2005

A. MESSAGE FROM THE MINISTER

As Chair of the Senior Citizens' Secretariat, I am pleased to table the Secretariat's Business Plan for 2004-05. The Government of Nova Scotia has made the health and well-being of seniors a priority and this, the Secretariat's first business plan, supports that priority.

In 2004-05, the Senior Citizens' Secretariat will build on its past success as it continues to facilitate the development of public policies and programs for seniors, in partnership with government departments and voluntary seniors groups.

In addition to promoting a broad and comprehensive understanding of seniors issues, the Secretariat provides government with the multi-disciplinary perspective needed to develop appropriate public policies, programs, and services for seniors today and in the future. It also gives older Nova Scotians a strong voice in planning their future.

A key priority of the Secretariat this year is to provide leadership for the Nova Scotia Task Force on Aging. The Task Force will consult with Nova Scotians and seek their input on the development of a provincial strategy for positive aging – to guide our response to the challenges and opportunities of an aging population.

Other priorities for 2004-05 will see the Secretariat leading the implementation of the elder abuse prevention strategy, partnering with the Office of Health Promotion to encourage healthy living among seniors, and establishing partnerships with other organizations to strengthen community-based, peer support, and volunteer networks for seniors.

These and many other investments clearly demonstrate the government's ongoing commitment to seniors and to achieving the Secretariat's vision, "Nova Scotia, a society for all ages, promotes the well-being and contributions of older people in all aspects of life."

The Honourable Angus MacIsaac
Chairperson of the Senior Citizens' Secretariat

B. INTRODUCTION

The Nova Scotia Seniors Citizens' Secretariat facilitates the development of policies on aging and programs for seniors across government. The Secretariat consists of the Minister of Health, Minister of Community Services, Minister of Education, Minister of Service Nova Scotia & Municipal Relations, and Minister of Health Promotion. The Minister of Health serves as the Chairperson of the Secretariat and Nova Scotia's Minister Responsible for Seniors. The Secretariat is staffed by an Executive Director and five permanent staff.

C. MANDATE

The Secretariat's mandate is to serve as a resource and information centre on all matters relating to aging and seniors and to facilitate the planning and development of services and programs for seniors by:

- developing plans, policies, and programs for and with seniors in partnership with government departments and voluntary seniors groups
- coordinating plans, policies, and programs presented by government departments.

D. VISION

Nova Scotia, a society for all ages, promotes the well-being and contributions of older people in all aspects of life. (Modeled after Vision for National Framework on Aging)

E. PLANNING CONTEXT

The Government of Nova Scotia has made the well-being of seniors a priority. In the coming decades, the aging of our communities will create unprecedented economic, social, and political challenges and opportunities that have wide-ranging implications for the programs and services that contribute to the well-being of seniors.

Demographics: Nova Scotia's population is already the oldest in Atlantic Canada and the third oldest in Canada. Every day in this province, 21 Nova Scotians celebrate their 65th birthday, a number that will rise steadily with the aging of the baby-boomers. Seniors are the fastest growing population group in Nova Scotia and Canada. Today, the number of seniors in Nova Scotia is estimated at 131,000 — a figure that, by 2026, is expected to almost double to 239,000. In 2026, seniors will make up one-quarter of Nova Scotia's population.

The rapid aging of the province's population is already evident in many Nova Scotia communities. Nearly one in five residents (18 %) of Nova Scotia's 32 towns is 65 or older. In fact, more than one-quarter of the residents of Mahone Bay, Lunenburg, Digby, and Annapolis Royal are seniors.

Health: The health status of the vast majority of Nova Scotia seniors allows them to live independently in the community. Only five percent of seniors reside in nursing homes or licensed residential care facilities. The remaining 95 percent live at home in owned or rented accommodation.

The use of the health care system tends to increase with age. Physician visits to both general practitioners and specialists increase steadily with age. Similarly, the use of health care services such as emergency visits, outpatient procedures, and surgery generally increases with age. In 2001/02, seniors accounted for over four in ten (42%) adult hospitalizations.

Literacy Levels: Nova Scotia seniors generally have low literacy levels. In 1994, fewer than one in five seniors had the minimum level of literacy required for coping effectively with day-to-day activities and interactions. Recent studies link poor health status with low literacy levels (AMA).

Income: Although seniors are better off financially than ever before, they continue to have lower incomes than their younger counterparts. In 2000, the average household income for the 74,700 senior households in the province was $31,100. Incomes among seniors were 35% lower than the 50-64 age group, and 45% below the under 50 group. Seniors derived about half of their income from Old Age Security (OAS) and Canada Pension Plan (CPP), a third from private pensions, and the remainder from investments and employment. However, despite income security programs, 6% or 7,000 seniors were living below Statistic Canada's low-income cut-off (LICO) in 1999. The vast majority (85%) of seniors living in economic hardship were women living by themselves.

The primary responsibility for providing leadership on aging issues rests with the government. The Senior Citizens' Secretariat, whose Ministers are responsible for departments with program responsibilities for the seniors population, is the appropriate agency to provide this leadership.

To allow sufficient lead time to address the complex public policy and resource allocation issues that will arise as Nova Scotia's population ages, government must begin planning now. The design of appropriate solutions and the development of an action plan will require the collaboration of many departments and all levels of government, as well as the active involvement of content experts and well-informed seniors.

F. STRATEGIC GOALS

I. BUDGET CONTEXT

The Department of Health carries out finance, human resources, and information technology functions on behalf of the Secretariat. This enables the Secretariat to function with minimal expenditure for administrative overhead.

Several of the government's commitments require the Secretariat to serve in the capacity of lead agency or partner. To enable the Secretariat to carry out these initiatives in 2004-2005, including the Task Force on Aging, an additional budget allocation was provided.

The Secretariat has been successful in realizing resources from its project partners, such as the receipt of $56,000 from the National Literacy Secretariat of HRDC to continue its Seniors' Literacy Project, which focuses on improving the reading, writing, and math skills of older adults.

Another example of a significant and effective partnership at work for the seniors of Nova Scotia is the in-kind contribution negotiated between the Executive Director of the Secretariat with the Regional Director General of Social Development Canada (formerly HRDC) to assign a staff member to assist on issues affecting Nova Scotia seniors.

J. PERFORMANCE MEASURES

In 2004-05, the Seniors' Citizens' Secretariat will establish a formal performance measurement system. Three performance measures were identified for 2004-05 to provide information about some of the Secretariat's key initiatives. Over time, new measures will be developed and current ones improved, as the Secretariat strives to continuously improve its performance.

In 2004-05, important baseline information will be established for each of the performance measures identified. This information will help the Secretariat set future performance targets.
