The mighty Ashuapmushuan

A queen among Québec rivers, the Ashuapmushuan is wild and impetuous, a river that you need to travel at least once in a lifetime to feel the thrill that the coureurs des bois and natives experienced when they rode its rushing waters down the fur trade route. Because the current is strong, rafting through Class 1 and Class 2 rapids is done in Rabaska canoes.

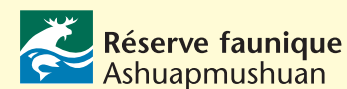

This powerful river runs over 200 km with an average flow of 921 m<sup>3</sup>/second before emptying into Lac Saint-Jean, providing 22% of the lake's annual water input. In certain places, the river forms a narrow valley. Its course is punctuated with a dozen or so waterfalls, the most impressive being the Chaudière falls with its deep whirlpools. The Ashuapmushuan is the site of the largest breeding grounds for landlocked salmon in Lac Saint-Jean and is a sanctuary during the major part of the fishing season.

The cabins at Halte des Draveurs are great for canoe-camping enthusiasts, fishers, and vacationers alike.

Ashuapmushuan

"The place where moose are seen"

The natural environment of the wildlife reserve—a vast territory the Montagnais called Ashuapmushuan or "the place where moose are seen"—features over 1,200 lakes scattered across a landscape of rolling hills and lowlands. The wildlife is diverse and the natural splendor breathtaking. Wild and mighty, Rivière Ashuapmushuan was once a busy travel route used by natives. Today, it is an outdoor destination treasured by river rafting enthusiasts seeking spectacular natural settings.
