Wildlife Management

Visitors appreciate Réserve faunique de Rimouski for its approach to resource management and sustainable development. With this in mind, wildlife managers are continually studying reserve wildlife and habitat in order to develop the best management projects possible for enhancing the wildlife potential.

Aquatic Management:

- Fish-ladders on some bodies of water
- Control of white sucker populations in some areas
- River management for speckled trout
- Rebuilding and management of shallows
- Speckled trout stocking
- Analysis of spawning ground potential and improvements to increase productivity

Land Management:

- Habitat studies and aerial surveys of large wildlife (moose and white-tailed deer)
- Analysis of forest management plans to improve game species habitat
- Salt marsh management

A Wilderness Garden of Eden

The territory of Réserve faunique de Rimouski was once made up of several private hunting and fishing clubs. The quality of sport hunting and fishing here has remained high. Thanks to the incredible biological diversity of the wildlife reserve, the wildlife observation sites that have been set up, in particular for deer, moose and beavers, attract a large number of visitors. A stay on this territory will allow you to contemplate the great beauty of nature while discovering a very hospitable setting in a truly enchanted forest...
