McMICHAEL CANADIAN ART COLLECTION AND HALIBURTON SCHOOL OF THE ARTS

Education is evolving at the McMichael Canadian Art Collection. With an exciting new project that marks a first in our forty-year history, the gallery will team with the renowned Haliburton School of The Arts to deliver accredited studio programs at the McMichael "campus" in September 2007.

If you have ever wanted to experience the collection, explore the grounds, and pursue post-secondary courses at our intimate and inspiring gallery, now is your chance. Join us for these engaging studio classes and earn credits toward your Visual and Creative Arts Diploma at Fleming College.

This pilot program will include a wide range of courses suitable for everyone from beginner to advanced level. Expert faculty from the Haliburton School will lead all classes, and the emphasis will be on learning and creating in a welcoming and supportive environment.

Each program includes thirty-two and a half-hours of in-class instruction and fifteen hours of self-directed study. Classes will run at the gallery from Monday to Friday the weeks of September 17th and September 24th. Participants may choose from five different courses including Multi-Media Landscape Painting with John Leonard, Soft Pastels with Ursula Reese, Photography with John Dowding, Landscape Painting in Transparent Watercolour – Intermediate/ Advanced with Jake Mol, and Naturally
