A Message from the Chairman

The Annual Report provides information on the management and direction of the Government of the Northwest Territories (GNWT). In accordance with the Public Service Act, this information on the GNWT is to be reported to the Legislative Assembly.

This is the combined 1996 and 1997 Annual Report for the Public Service of the Northwest Territories. It highlights the programs, initiatives and achievements of this government in meeting the challenge of change and support of the continued development of the NWT.

During this time, the Government was facing significant financial pressures. The GNWT had to make hard choices and review how this government does business.

From a Public Service perspective the focus was on streamlining work, to improve efficiency and to eliminate the duplication of duties among departments while at the same time preparing for the Division of the Territory. The members of the Public Service rose to the occasion. A significant amount of time and energy was devoted by employees to support these initiatives. This work has been greatly appreciated and has not gone unrecognized by Senior Management and Cabinet.

Forward

This report addresses:

- Major government initiatives affecting the public service in the 1996 and 1997 years respectively;
- An update of the GNWT's key human resource initiatives, with detailed statistical information; and
- A statistical profile of the public service.

The report is structured into the following sections:

- Government Initiatives
- Staffing
- Human Resource Planning
- Training and Development
- Job Evaluation
- Labour Relations
- Workforce Profile

The information contained in this report does not include the Northwest Territories Power Corporation.

Government Initiatives

Preparing for the Creation of Nunavut and the New Western Government

On June 10th, 1993 the Nunavut Act was passed by Parliament bringing the Northwest Territories to the edge of a new era.

The creation of Nunavut and the New Western Territory on April 1st, 1999, had a great impact on the way Northerners see themselves in the North and the way business is conducted north of 60.

It is planned that, as a result of Division, the public service in the New Western Territory will decrease by 300 employees and the Nunavut Public Service will increase by 700.

Division has created new unions for the public service in Nunavut; the Nunavut Employees' Union and the Nunavut Teachers' Federation. The Union of Northern Workers and the Northwest Territories Teachers' Association will continue to represent the employees in the New Western Territory. Each territory will function independently as an employer.

Many of the initiatives affecting the Public Service in 1996 and 1997 were undertaken with the creation of Nunavut and the New Western Territory in mind. The emphasis was on preparing both emerging governments for the greatly anticipated due date of April 1st, 1999.

Initiatives during this time included the creation of a Northern Benefits Package, the completion of departmental amalgamations, the establishment of a project team for the implementation of the PeopleSoft Human Resource Information System, and the introduction of an internal staffing process in 1997.

The success of these initiatives has provided the GNWT with the stability necessary to meet the challenges associated with the creation of Nunavut and the New Western Territory.

Delegation of Authority

In 1996 and 1997 the GNWT faced severe financial restraint. This required the government to take stock and look at how it was operating. It was determined that there was a need to push accountability for many functions out of centralized agencies and into the departments. This would allow departments to better consider the total costs of programs and gain efficiency by streamlining. Authority and accountability transferred from central agencies to the individual departments, boards, and agencies.

In April of 1997, the User Say/User Pay initiative went ahead. Cabinet's philosophy was to streamline the GNWT and to give departments, boards and agencies more autonomy over their operations. Departmental functions shifted as they became more aware of the costs and issues related to support services. The User Say/User Pay approach to business provided for clearer accountability for program costs and greater flexibility for standards and procedures. This approach had departments take control of many of their internal and external functions including human resource functions such as staffing and termination of staff, administration of medical travel, removals and benefits, project management services, internal mail, records storage, property management, office space leasing, utilities payment, vehicle acquisitions, and maintenance.

Under the Public Service Act, the Chairman of the Financial Management Board has authority for specific human resource functions and authorities. In an effort to provide Deputy Heads of Departments with the tools they need to manage their human resources, many of these authorities held by the Chairman of the Financial Management Board were delegated to Deputy Heads in 1996. These delegations included:

- lay-off;
- dismissal;
- rejection on probation;
- medical termination;
- suspension pending investigation;
- abandonment of position; and
- leave without pay for personal reasons.

The delegation of staffing authority, secondments, transfer assignments, removal entitlements and medical travel assistance was also initiated in 1996 and completed through 1997 to offer wider, more accessible service to employees.

Placing this authority at the department level provided for a more efficient and timely means of addressing employee issues. This is consistent with the government's goal to have each department, board and agency responsible for its own human resource functions.

PeopleSoft

The GNWT and the Government of Nunavut purchased a new Human Resource Information System to replace outdated legacy systems that are not Year 2000 compliant. PeopleSoft, the selected software, is one of the world's leading Human Resource Information System software providers. The windows based software uses state-of-the-art technology.

By converting over to this new system, both governments will be better able to maintain vital organizational data. PeopleSoft is designed to complement business applications so that users can extract, analyze, and present information with ease. This new system will eliminate duplicate entries and will keep human resource and payroll information accurate and consistent. Having this information organized and easily accessible will ultimately facilitate better record keeping and decision-making for both governments.

Community Empowerment

In recent years, community leaders and the public have asked for more control, authority and decision-making ability to help create stronger, more effective and healthier communities. On May 1, 1996, the Premier tabled the Agenda For Change. In this document, Cabinet identified Community Empowerment as one of its major priorities, stating that, "... a priority of this Government is to empower communities so that they can become more self-reliant, responsible and accountable."

Communities have requested more responsibility and authority to manage programs, services and infrastructure according to local values and requirements. With this authority, communities can more effectively access and utilize local skills and resources. The Community Empowerment Initiative provides the tools to do this.

The government is facilitating Community Empowerment by providing training, support and advice to communities. As communities are at different levels of readiness and ability to accept these new responsibilities, the government will assist each community. Community Empowerment Coordinators have been hired for each region and Regional Interdepartmental Community Empowerment Teams have been established to work with community leaders and the public to identify community needs.

A number of transfers have taken place and many more empowerment agreements are in various stages of completion. Staff, programs, funding and infrastructure will continue to move to the community level. This means that over time the Public Service will decrease in size. Services that were previously provided by the GNWT will be provided by communities. In many cases Public Service employees' move with the program and work for the community.

Self Government

The GNWT respects traditional knowledge, Aboriginal rights, the environment, and traditional land use practices. As we embark into the new millenium, Aboriginal governments will take their place in the unique political mosaic in the West. Completing land claims and resolving other Aboriginal issues will provide the stability necessary to secure the future for all the people who live in the Northwest Territories. Aboriginal partnerships in the West and with Nunavut will be key in setting priorities and accomplishing goals.

Similar to community empowerment, aboriginal self-government will greatly change the delivery of services and programs in the NWT. The GNWT will transfer programs to regional and community self-government bodies. This will decrease the size of the public service. It is anticipated that similar to community empowerment, many GNWT employees' will move with the transferred program and become employed by the new regional self-government bodies.

Employee Salary and Benefits

The GNWT is reducing its dependence on human resources from southern labour markets. Every year, increasing numbers of Northerners are training to fill northern jobs. In 1996, the GNWT moved towards a compensation and benefits package that better supported a northern workforce.

In 1996, the GNWT returned to the bargaining table to negotiate new collective agreements with both the Union of Northern Workers (UNW) and the Northwest Territories Teachers' Association.

These rounds of bargaining also took place at a time when fiscal restraint was becoming a large issue for the Government. The need to be responsive to a northern workforce and fiscal restraint resulted in collective agreements with the following:

- Vacation Travel Assistance and Settlement Allowance replaced by the Northern Allowance

- 5 days of leave without pay for all employees in the UNW bargaining unit except those in continuous operations

- capping ultimate removal to a flat dollar amount by community

- elimination of the $5400 housing allowance, roll $5400 into salary and reduce the new amount by 6.25%

Terms and conditions of employment for non-bargaining unit employees were also amended to reflect these changes.

In 1997, the GNWT began preparations for 1998 collective bargaining. Part of the preparation for collective bargaining included the development of a compensation philosophy that could guide the development of a new pay plan. The GNWT wanted to implement the Hay Job Evaluation System and negotiate a new pay plan to compensate employees using the Hay job evaluation system. The GNWT's previous classification system was outdated and was no longer meeting the needs of the organization.

As the first stage in this process, the GNWT conducted a survey of all employees in August 1997. The compensation goals for the project were:

- To provide information to assist in the development of the compensation philosophy

- To provide information on employees' views on the compensation and benefits provided

The second phase of the project was to survey jobs in other jurisdictions to obtain up to date salary and benefit comparisons.

The final phase of the project was to meet with deputy heads to develop a pay framework and to develop a mandate for upcoming negotiations. The goal of the session was to familiarize the deputy heads with the compensation issues facing them and to review the options available to continue the evolution of the compensation and benefit program to best fit a northern labour force.

COST OF THE PUBLIC SERVICE

The cost of maintaining the Public Service has been reduced by the development of a smaller, more efficient workforce and through adjustments to benefits and allowances during collective bargaining.

Staffing

Prior to 1996, the Personnel Secretariat conducted staffing for all GNWT Public Service positions except those boards and agencies with delegated authority. The NWT Housing Corporation, Workers' Compensation Board, Hospitals and Health Boards and Divisional Boards of Education (teachers only) conducted their own competitions. In April 1996, the authority to staff positions was delegated to several departments that had been trained to assume this role. Training continued throughout 1996 and staffing authority was successfully delegated to all departments.

The Personnel Secretariat continued to conduct operational reviews of the staffing function through 1996 and into the fall of 1997.

Recruitment

There are several factors that challenge the GNWT's ability to recruit employees from the North. The remoteness of some northern communities; difficulties accessing the training required to compete for jobs within the GNWT; and competition from other employers in the private sector. These factors challenge the GNWT to find new ways to successfully recruit northern candidates for northern jobs. This has resulted in the creation of a Teacher Education Program and a Northern Nursing Program. These programs are aimed at training northerners to fill jobs in the North.

Direct Appointments

A direct appointment is an alternative to the competition process that supports the Affirmative Action Policy and career development of Aboriginal employees.

The GNWT seeks to increase the number of Aboriginal and northern employees in the Public Service so that the workforce better represents the population in the Northwest Territories. A direct appointment is a mechanism whereby human resource planners in the GNWT can staff positions with qualified Aboriginal or northern workers. Direct appointments may also be used to fill senior management positions with qualified women.

In 1996, departments were delegated the authority to submit requests to Cabinet to directly appoint an individual to a position. Prior to this delegation these requests had to be channeled through the Personnel Secretariat.

The following graph shows the number of direct appointments in 1996 and 1997. The graph demonstrates the reduced staffing that occurred in 1997 as a result of reorganization and downsizing.

Direct Appointments

Secondments and Transfer Assignments

The use of secondments and transfer assignments allows the organization to develop its human resources by providing employees with a broader range of work experience. Secondments involve the temporary assignment of an employee to an employer outside of the government where such an assignment will benefit the GNWT. A transfer assignment temporarily reassigns an employee either to another position in the same department or to another department within the GNWT. This proved to be a valuable tool during the reorganization of departments and functions that occurred in 1997 as is demonstrated by the high number of transfer assignments in that year.

The following graph shows point in time figures for secondments and transfer assignments in process at the end of 1996 and at the end of 1997.

Secondments and Transfer Assignments (at December 31st )

Employment Activity

The GNWT workforce is constantly changing. Staff turnover is due to many factors, including new recruitment, terminations (resignation, end of term employment, retirement, layoffs, dismissals), lateral transfers and promotions.

The NWT does not have a well-developed labour market for many occupations. Therefore, occupational groups within the GNWT are subject to the supply and demand of skilled labour across the country. For example, if compensation is higher for a welder or a nurse in Alberta, the GNWT has difficulty competing with that jurisdiction. Retaining workers within the public service is critical as a high turnover rate of employees can drain time and valuable resources. Training new employees and relocating old ones is expensive. Therefore, the GNWT must constantly monitor the national scene for trends that can affect the human resource pool in the North. It is important that the GNWT's compensation package remains competitive. This must be balanced against ensuring that compensation is structured for a northern workforce. Currently emphasis is also being placed on developing a northern labour force market.

Total employment activity for 1996 and 1997 is summarized in the following graph.

Employment Activity (at December 31st )

Lay-Offs

The Lay-off Provisions introduced in 1995 continued to be applied in 1996 and 1997. Lay-off employees are eligible to choose from a number of options available including separation assistance, severance priority, and education assistance.

Separation assistance provides a generous financial compensation package based upon the employee's years of service. The severance priority option entitles lay-off employees to moderate financial compensation as well as being placed on the priority staffing list for a period of one year from the last day of their notice period. Education assistance is available to lay-off employees with greater than three years of continuous service and provides lay-off employees with 80% of their salary for up to 12 months while they are enrolled in an approved educational program.

In 1996, a total of 365 lay-off notices were issued, a 265% increase from 1995. The increase in lay-off notices served can be attributed to the downsizing and restructuring initiatives put in place to improve operational efficiency and to eliminate the Government's deficit. In 1997, lay-off notices were issued to 230 employees.

The lay-off figures do not necessarily reflect a loss of expertise from the government however, as many employees chose to be re-deployed rather than being laid off. The following chart shows how many employees chose each option for 1996 and 1997

Lay-off Notices Issued

Human Resource Planning

Human Resource Planning encompasses the policies, programs and initiatives designed to assist in managing the recruitment, retention, assessment, training and development of human resources to achieve organizational objectives.

During 1996, the Human Resource Planning Committee continued its work in the areas of affirmative action and employee assistance through its task/user groups.

Affirmative Action Initiatives

A comprehensive review of the GNWT Affirmative Action Policy began in 1994 and continued through 1997.

The review has included extensive consultation both internal and external to the GNWT and comprehensive reports have been developed.

The Government is committed to employing a public service that is representative of the population it serves. The Affirmative Action Policy includes measures to help under-represented groups secure and retain employment. The under-represented groups identified are: Aboriginal persons, indigenous non-Aboriginal persons, women in management, women in non-traditional occupations and disabled persons.

Representation of affirmative action groups in the public service has increased since the policy was implemented in 1989. From 1989 to 1997, the number of Aboriginal employees has increased from 1,613 to 1,879, an increase of 16.5 percent. During the same period, the growth of the public service overall was 4.1 percent. Growth of Aboriginal employment in the public service since 1976 and Aboriginal employees by occupational category are depicted in the following charts. Also shown is a breakdown of employment by affirmative action group and male and female by occupational category. Information detailed by department, board and agency is provided in the workforce profile section at the end of this report.

Aboriginal Employment Growth in the Public Service

Aboriginal Employees by Occupational Category (at December 31)

Employees by Affirmative Action Group (at December 31)

Female and Male Employees by Occupational Category (at December 31)

Employee Family Assistance Program

A pilot Employee Family Assistance Program (EFAP) was made available to employees of the GNWT and their families in 1996 and 1997. The program offers free confidential advice, assessment, referral and short term counseling for employees and their dependents. Eight free counseling sessions are provided on any particular issue. This program is designed to assist employees and their families in dealing with personal difficulties such as:

- personal and family concerns
- stress
- grieving
- substance abuse
- financial and legal concerns
- depression
- work and career issues

Employees may access the program through a 1-800 toll-free number available anywhere in the NWT. The program was assessed for its effectiveness. This assessment found that the EFAP was viewed by employees as a valuable resource. However, at times the delivery of services was not up to standards. Therefore, work is being done to correct this problem and ensure the program continues to meet the needs of employees and their families.

Long Service

The GNWT values the organizational knowledge which is retained by those employees who have shown a commitment to the government and to the North.

The following table and graph show the number of employees who have reached service career landmarks at the end of the 1997 calendar year.

Long Service by Region

(as of December 31, 1997)

Region	Years of Service
	10	15	20	25

Keewatin	21	3	1	2
Kitikmeot	21	4	1	1
Total Employees	261	105	53	29

Long Service by Years of Service

Training and Development

The Department of Education, Culture, and Employment, Nunavut Arctic College, and Aurora College worked together over the 1996 and 1997 years to provide training to people in the North. Much of the training delivered focused on the development of skills necessary to equip staff with the tools required for a smooth transition upon division. Other training initiatives were geared on training Northerners to fill northern jobs. Training initiatives included:

- Literacy Funding
- Educational Development
- Language Development Program
- Nunavut Arctic College Programs
- Youth Business Works
- Public Service Career Training Program (PSCTP)
- Nunavut Career Assignment Program (NCAP)
- NWT Educational Leadership Program
- Developmental Courses
- Nurse Programs
- Teacher Education Program
- Apprenticeships

Nunavut Unified Human Resources Strategy (NUHRDS)

Federal funding was received for the development of NURHDS, a joint initiative between the Nunavut Implementation Committee, Nunavut Tunngavik Incorporated, Nunavut Arctic College, Aurora College and the GNWT. The focus of the strategy is the development of a representative public service for the Government of Nunavut.

Public Service Career Training Program (PSCTP)

A portion of the funding from NUHRDS has been directed to the Public Service Career Training Program (PSCTP), an ongoing GNWT training initiative which provides training support and cost subsidies to Departments, Boards, and Agencies to train Affirmative Action candidates for GNWT officer and management positions. Trainees in 1996 and 1997 were provided with on-the-job training, self-directed learning activities, and short courses.

Northwest Territories Educational Leadership Program

The GNWT is focused on training Northerners to fill northern jobs. Another training program that has gained momentum and experienced success is the Northwest Territories Educational Leadership Program. As of July 1, 1996 all school principals in the NWT and Nunavut must either have this certification or obtain it within two years of becoming a principal. Geared to enhance and hone the skills of people working in the education profession, this program was spearheaded by the Department of Education, Culture and Employment. In phase one of the program, teachers gather to learn about school culture management, instructional leadership, advocacy and organizational management. Phase two delves into building community networks, governance, and community educational planning.

Nursing Program-Aurora College

This program trains students to become nurses, with a focus on developing a northern workforce. The Nursing Access year provides an avenue for those individuals that may not have had success in previous schooling but have the desire to become nurses. In the future, Aurora College will be working on developing and delivering a nursing baccalaureate program.

Promoting careers in Nursing is a primary strategy for the Department of Health and Social Services and the Department of Education, Culture and Employment. In anticipation of the number of new nursing graduates seeking employment, several government departments and other stakeholders including the NWT Registered Nurses' Association, began meeting to discuss how the new graduates would be integrated in the workplace.

From these discussions the idea of a Nursing Mentorship Program grew. In 1997, the Nursing Mentorship Program began and has since been expanded to include graduates from the social work field. Graduates rate it highly in terms of helping them to gain the confidence and work skills needed to succeed in the professional health care environment.

Teacher Education Program (TEP)

The goal of the NWT Teacher Education Program is to produce homegrown, professional educators who are representative of the population in the Northwest Territories and Nunavut. Once students complete the diploma program in the NWT they can advance into the education degree program at the University of Saskatchewan. Since 1968, 395 teachers have graduated from TEP.

Beginning in 1990, the programs were decentralized and delivered at the community level as well as at the central campuses in Fort Smith and Iqaluit.

In 1996-97, the Nunavut Arctic College TEP was delivered in Iqaluit, Cambridge Bay, Cape Dorset and Coral Harbour. The Aurora College TEP in the West was delivered in Fort Smith, Yellowknife, Deh Cho and Sahtu. During this time period, 16 teachers graduated through NWT colleges and 15 former graduates went on to complete their degree at the University of Saskatchewan.

NWT Apprenticeship Program

The NWT Apprenticeship, Trade and Occupations Certifications Board has a legislated mandate to make recommendations to the Minister of Education, Culture and Employment with regards to training and certification for both the traditional trades and other designated occupations in the NWT.

There are 43 designated trades in the NWT of which 27 enjoy Interprovincial Red Seal Status. Journeypersons who are designated as having this interprovincial status can have their credentials recognized anywhere in Canada. This program is seen as a superior labour mobility program nationwide.

The apprentice system has been active in the Northwest Territories since 1964. Since that date, 4,015 tradespersons have been certified under the Apprenticeship, Trade and Occupations Certification Act and its two predecessor Acts.

Apprenticeship is a successful on-the-job training program with 80% of the training taking place in a formal training environment. Yearly graduation statistics indicate that approximately 80% of all applicants who enter the program graduate as certified journeypersons. Of those graduating, 60% of the apprentices achieve Interprovincial Red Seal Status at the time of the certification as journeypersons.

Nunavut Career Assignment Program (NCAP)

The Nunavut Career Assignment Program (NCAP) was initiated in 1997, using the PSCTP as its' model. NCAP is fully funded through NUHRDS, its' goal being to assist in the preparation of a representative public service for the Government of Nunavut.

Participants of NCAP are co-managed under the guidance of GNWT Senior Managers or specialists in senior positions that will be required in the new Nunavut public service. Training also includes on-the-job training, job shadowing, short courses, and on-the-job learning. Together these initiatives will help participants to develop their management, leadership, and specialized skills.

Between August and December of 1997 fourteen of the eighteen senior management and specialist positions identified from the report "Footprints II" as being suitable for development before March 31, 1999 had been staffed with land claim beneficiaries.

Developmental Courses

To equip employees with the latest knowledge in the areas of financial management and computer science, training in the 1996 and 1997 years focused on the delivery of financial management and computer training modules.

To meet the increasing human resource management training needs of departments, the Colleges also facilitated a number of training events in 1996. One of these events, "The Hiring Process" was attended by more than 65 management and human resource practitioners over the course of the year. Other human resource training sessions included:

- Beyond Downsizing
- Negotiation Skills
- Linking Strategic Planning & Human Resource Management
- Effective On-the-Job Trainer
- Leadership in a New Climate
- Conflict Resolution and Maximizing Employee Performance.

Job Evaluation

1996 and 1997 were challenging times in job evaluation, with significant maintenance, developmental, and transitional activities. The bulk of the workload resulted from departmental re-organizations, amalgamations and preparations for division.

Maintenance

A summary of Job Evaluation activity is presented below and illustrates the number of jobs that were created, upgraded, downgraded, confirmed and deleted. In addition to those on the graph below, miscellaneous transactions, which consist of such things as title changes or index code changes for positions (5,069 and 2,836 respectively for 1996 and 1997) took place.

Summary of Job Evaluation Activity

Development

In April, 1996 a decision was made to replace the existing classification system with the Hay Job Evaluation System that would evaluate all GNWT jobs under one plan. The Hay Consulting Group was engaged to oversee the project. Objectives of the project were to reduce the number of job descriptions (currently at 7000); and develop and implement a comprehensive system that is easy to understand, user friendly, gender neutral and complies with industry standards.

Departmental facilitators and committees were trained in the application of the Hay Job Evaluation System and began to evaluate jobs within their respective departments. The Union of Northern Workers also received an orientation to the new system. Implementation of the new system was scheduled for 1998.

Transition

In concert with the implementation of the Hay Job Evaluation System, the job evaluation function was to be delegated to departments. The Job Evaluation Division became a section of the Labour Relations and Compensation Division of FMBS in 1997 in preparation to support the delegated job evaluation model. The role of the Job Evaluation section shifted from “hands-on” job evaluation to consulting with the departments and providing training, guidance and assistance. The section will monitor cross-departmental job evaluation activities. This is a new approach to providing service that is having a positive impact and is giving departments greater autonomy to react to internal changes.

Composition of the Public Service

At the end of 1996 and 1997 the Government had 5,548 and 5,246 employees respectively. These figures include full time, term, part-time and seasonal employees. Of these employees, the majority, 86% in 1996 and 85% in 1997 were unionized. The Union of Northern Workers (UNW) represented 68% of employees in 1996 and 66% in 1997. The Northwest Territories Teachers' Association represented the remaining unionized employees, 19% in both 1996 and 1997. The following chart depicts the relative size of the employee groups that comprise the public service.

Employees by Pay Group

Non-unionized employees belong to either the excluded or managerial group. In 1996, 547 non-unionized employees were excluded and 244 belonged to the management group. For 1997 these figures were 527 and 224, respectively. Together, excluded and management employees made up 14% of the public service in 1996 and 15% in 1997.

Amendments to the *Public Service Act (PSA)

On February 21, 1996, Bill 2 was passed to amend the Public Service Act. Prior to the passing of Bill 2, the collective bargaining process required that unresolved disagreements, arising during the negotiation of a collective agreement, be referred to an arbitrator for a binding decision. This resulted in decisions being imposed on the GNWT and the UNW by an arbitrator from southern Canada who may not be sensitive to the unique situations in the Northwest Territories.

Under the new Act, if negotiations and mediation do not achieve a new collective agreement within a reasonable time after the old agreement expires, the government has the ability to change the terms and conditions of employment. Conversely, the Union and employees have the right to strike. The right to strike was introduced for unionized employee groups. This right may be exercised after meeting certain criteria outlined in the Public Service Act, including a mediation process and negotiation of an essential services agreement. This has replaced the previous process of interest arbitration. Collective bargaining now operates in more of a joint problem-solving environment, as the parties can no longer rely upon an arbitrator to resolve an impasse. This is consistent with the GNWT's overall direction of increasing accountability. Amendments also included defined bargaining units and criteria under which positions are excluded from the bargaining unit.

This new framework is modeled after those in place in many of the jurisdictions in Canada, including the framework under the Canada Labour Code which applies to other employers and employees in Canada.

The Minister responsible for the Public Service Act has made the commitment to enter into discussions with the two unions upon the conclusion of the negotiations of the UNW collective agreement. These discussions will include identifying whether consensus can be achieved for future improvements to the collective bargaining framework.

Union of Northern Workers (UNW)

The Government entered into negotiations for collective agreement renewal with the UNW in early 1996. Due to the changes to the Public Service Act in 1996, essential services negotiations were also initiated. At the conclusion of negotiations, the Employer put in writing its final offer to the Union for ratification by its members. The members voted in favor of accepting the Employer's offer and ratified the package. Changes included restructuring of salaries, five days mandatory leave without pay, a restructuring of the ultimate removal benefit and the implementation of a new Northern Allowance with travel and cost of living components. A further policy change outside of the collective bargaining arena was the deletion of the Accommodation Allowance. All changes were effective April 1, 1996.

Managers and Excluded Employees

Managers and excluded employees' terms and conditions of employment were amended in a similar manner to UNW employees. These changes were also effective April 1, 1996.

Northwest Territories Teachers' Association

Collective bargaining in 1996 did not result in a negotiated collective agreement. The Minister implemented Terms and Conditions of employment for teachers on December 6, 1996, retroactive to September 1, 1996. The Teachers' Association filed legal action to challenge the Government's right to change the terms and conditions of employment. In a judgement by the Honourable Justice J.E. Richard, it was held that, once all statutory obligations under the Public Service Act were met, the Employer did have the right to impose terms and conditions of employment. However, these terms and conditions could not be imposed retroactively.

The Court further confirmed the GNWT's position that the terms and conditions imposed by the Minister did not constitute a collective agreement and did not terminate the parties' obligation to bargain in good faith. The two parties resumed bargaining and a negotiated settlement was reached with the NWTTA on October 2, 1997. The new collective agreement included many of the same provisions as were previously negotiated with the UNW, along with a signing bonus for employees on-strength in 1996/97 and revisions to the Northern Allowance schedule.

Equal Pay

In 1989 the Public Service Alliance of Canada (on behalf of the Union of Northern Workers) filed an equal pay complaint with the Canadian Human Rights Commission against the Government of the Northwest Territories. The Government sought clarification from the Federal Court about whether the Canadian Human Rights Commission has jurisdiction to investigate complaints against the GNWT. The GNWT believed that the complaint should have been made under the territorial legislation, the Fair Practices Act.

In 1996 the Federal Court ruled that the Canadian Human Rights Commission had jurisdiction to investigate the equal pay complaint under the Canadian Human Rights Act.

The Canadian Human Rights Commission referred part of the complaint to a Tribunal and kept part of the complaint under investigation. In 1997 a Tribunal was named to hear the complaint. In the fall of 1997, efforts to settle the complaint with the assistance of a mediator commenced. In January 1998, mediation ended without a settlement being reached.

Grievances and Arbitrations

The following chart shows arbitration activity during 1996 and 1997. The average cost to the GNWT for a formal arbitration hearing is about $5,000. In 1996, 45 grievances were resolved at the third level, with 37 referred to arbitration. In 1997, 49 grievances were resolved at the third level and 44 were referred to arbitration.

Arbitration Activity

Workplace Harassment

In 1995/96 a review was initiated of the existing Sexual Harassment Policy. This policy includes the designation of sexual harassment officers in each department, board and agency to deal with questions, investigate complaints, and provide pamphlets on sexual harassment and employee rights and responsibilities to employees.

The review included input from all GNWT departments, the UNW and NWTTA. The results of the review indicated the policy should be expanded to a Workplace Harassment Policy. In 1997 these results were being examined further to determine the feasibility of the initiative.

Staffing Appeals

The staffing appeal process allows a Government employee or an affirmative action candidate who has applied on a position in the UNW bargaining unit to request a review of a competition if the applicant feels that the competition was improperly conducted. An appeal hearing provides an objective review of the staffing process and application of the Affirmative Action Policy, by including representatives from the GNWT, the UNW and a neutral chairperson. Staffing appeal activity for 1996 and 1997 is shown below.

Workforce Profile

At the end of 1997, there were 5,246 employees in the public service at year-end. This is a decrease of 5.4% from 1996, where there were 5548 employees in the public service at year-end (a decrease of 9.5 % from 1995 workforce). These figures include all indeterminate, term, part-time and seasonal employees in all departments, boards and agencies.

Approximately 47% of public service employees were employed in Government departments in 1996, with this figure decreasing in 1997 to 44%. Employees of the Education Boards, including Arctic College and Aurora College, accounted for approximately 31% of the public service in 1996 and 32% in 1997. In 1996, approximately 18% of the public service was employed with Hospitals and Health Boards, this figure rising to almost 19.5% in 1997. The remaining 4% for both 1996 and 1997 respectively, were employed in the NWT Housing Corporation and Workers' Compensation Board.

The largest region is Headquarters with 33 percent of employees in 1996 and 34% in 1997. The Kitikmeot remains the smallest region with 6% of the public service in 1996 and 7% in 1997. The majority of GNWT employees (67% in 1996 and 66% in 1997) worked in the western arctic.

Most public service employees were in full-time indeterminate positions (80 percent in 1996 and 79% in 1997). Only 9% of employees in 1996 and 8% in 1997 were in part-time indeterminate positions, while a minimal 3% and 2% in 1996 and 1997 respectively held seasonal jobs. The remaining percentage of employees worked for a specified term of employment.

The average Government employee over the 1996 and 1997 period was 40 years of age in 1996 and 41 in 1997 and earned $50,000 a year in 1996 and $51,000 in 1997 and had worked for the public service for almost seven years in 1996 and 7.1 years in 1997.

The average aboriginal employee was 39 in 1996, earned $41,000 a year and had 6.6 years of service. In 1997, the average aboriginal employee was 40 years old, earned $42,387 and had 7.2 years of service. The average non-aboriginal employee was 41 years old in 1996, earned $56,000 a year and had 6.7 years of service. In 1997, the average non-aboriginal employee was 41 years old, earned $55,748 and had 7.1 years of service.

The average female employee was 39 in 1996, earned $46,000 a year and had 6.0 years of service. In 1997, the average female employee was 40 years old, earned $46,923 and had 6.5 years of service. The average male employee was 42 years old in 1996, earned $57,000 a year and had 7.6 years of service. In 1997, the average male employee was 42 years old, earned $56,810 and had 8.0 years of service.

This information indicates that the GNWT's workforce is fairly young. In addition, employees do not stay with the GNWT for lengthy periods of time. This indicates that efforts are required to reduce turnover and the costs associated with turnover (loss of knowledge and recruitment costs) as well as to engage in more succession planning and facilitate knowledge transfer amongst employees.

The average Eastern Arctic employee was 39 years old in 1996 and 39.5 years in 1997, earned $48,000 a year in 1996 and $48,566 in 1997 and had almost five and a half years of service at the end of 1996 and 5.7 at the end of 1997. The average Western Arctic employee was 41 years old in 1996 and 41.6 in 1997, earned $52,000 a year in 1996 and $55,748 in 1997 and had worked for the public service for almost seven and a half years in 1996 and 7.8 in 1997. The higher average ages and salaries in the West can be accounted for by the fact that Yellowknife is located in the West and Senior Management positions are located in Yellowknife. Senior Managers are generally older and earn more than other public service employees.

Of the Western Arctic employees, the average Headquarters employee was 42 years old in 1996 and 41.5 In 1997, earned $61,000 a year in 1996 and $55,809 in 1997 and had almost 9 years of service at the end of 1996 and 8.2 years at the end of 1997.

The annual absenteeism rate for the GNWT was 5.5% or approximately 13 days in 1996. This figure was 5.6% in 1997 with the same number of days. A breakdown of these figures shows the average employee was absent for 8 days per year due to illness and nearly 5 days annually for personal/family reasons in both 1996 and 1997.

The tables and graphs on the following pages provide an overview of employment in the public service for the 1996 and 1997 years.
