

CLERGY RESIDENCE DEDUCTION

- You have to complete this form to claim the clergy residence deduction. You complete Part A and Part C, and your employer completes Part B. If you have more than one employer in the year, each employer has to complete a separate Part B. In this situation, you must complete only one Part C calculation by combining the income from all eligible employers.
- You do not have to file this form with your return. However, you have to keep it in case we ask to see it.
- For more information, see Interpretation Bulletin IT-141, Clergy Residence Deduction.

	Note 2: The actual rent and utilities paid, or if the residence is owned, the fair rental value including utilities, must be reduced by all amounts, other than the employee's clergy residence deduction, that is claimed by you or any other person, (as explained in Note 3) in respect of the same accommodation, if the other amounts deducted are for the same months or period. This could arise, for example, when your spouse or common-law partner claims work-space-in-the-home expenses.
	Note 3 : If both spouses are claiming clergy residence deductions, the spouse with the higher salary should complete the calculation first, showing "0" on this line, provided there are no other deductions for accommodations other than clergy residence. The spouse with the lower salary should then take into consideration the deduction with respect to the clergy residence, made by the spouse with the higher salary, and also include any other deduction for the same accommodation (as explained in Note 2).
