

Public Service Grievance Board

ANNUAL REPORT

2018-2019

MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIR

I am pleased to present the Annual Report for the Public Service Grievance Board, which tracks our progress during the fiscal year 2018-2019 in fulfilling our mandate to provide independent third-party dispute resolution for non-unionized public servants. The Board has continued to carry out its mandate with skill, integrity and impartiality, in furtherance of the Board's consistent goal of encouraging harmonious workplace relations within the Ontario Public Service. I can report that the Board achieved this goal through the combined efforts of the Board's very capable members and staff.

The Board is currently composed of its Chair, Kathleen O'Neil, and four members, Reva Devins, Brendan Morgan, Marilyn Nairn, and Andrew Tremayne, all serving on a part-time basis. All five are professional labour relations adjudicators who bring to the Board extensive experience in the broader labour relations community as well as a particular familiarity with the Ontario Public Service (OPS). Their skills, experience, and professionalism are at the core of the effectiveness of the Board as an independent dispute resolution agency.

The Board's administrative staff continues to be led by Caroline Goodwin, the Board's Secretary. As a part-time Chair, I remain very much in her debt, and in the debt of her capable staff, for the impressive efficiency with which the Board is run. Their work - scheduling, tracking, communicating with and advising our clientele, internal and external - is essential to fulfilling the Board's responsibility to provide the highest quality dispute resolution services, and to be administratively accountable within the larger structure of government. Through their efforts, the Board has been able to meet its administrative responsibilities in a timely, responsible and cost-effective manner.

1. PSGB Mandate

The Public Service Grievance Board (PSGB or the Board) is an independent adjudicative tribunal that exercises the powers and duties conferred upon it by the Public Service of Ontario Act, 2006, and O. Reg. 378/07. The PSGB is classed as an adjudicative agency accountable to the legislature through the Minister of Labour. The overall objective of the Board is to provide dispute resolution services between certain management/excluded crown employees and the government as their employer.

The adjudicative independence and neutrality of the PSGB is preserved by its physical location - it is separated from government agencies other than its co-tribunal, the Grievance Settlement Board (GSB), and by the fact that the members of the PSGB are labour relations mediators/adjudicators who are prominent and well respected in the broader labour relations community. The Board's Chair and its Members bring to it extensive experience in both mediation and adjudication. When third party intervention is needed, the Board provides mediation or, in the alternative, an expeditious process of adjudication.

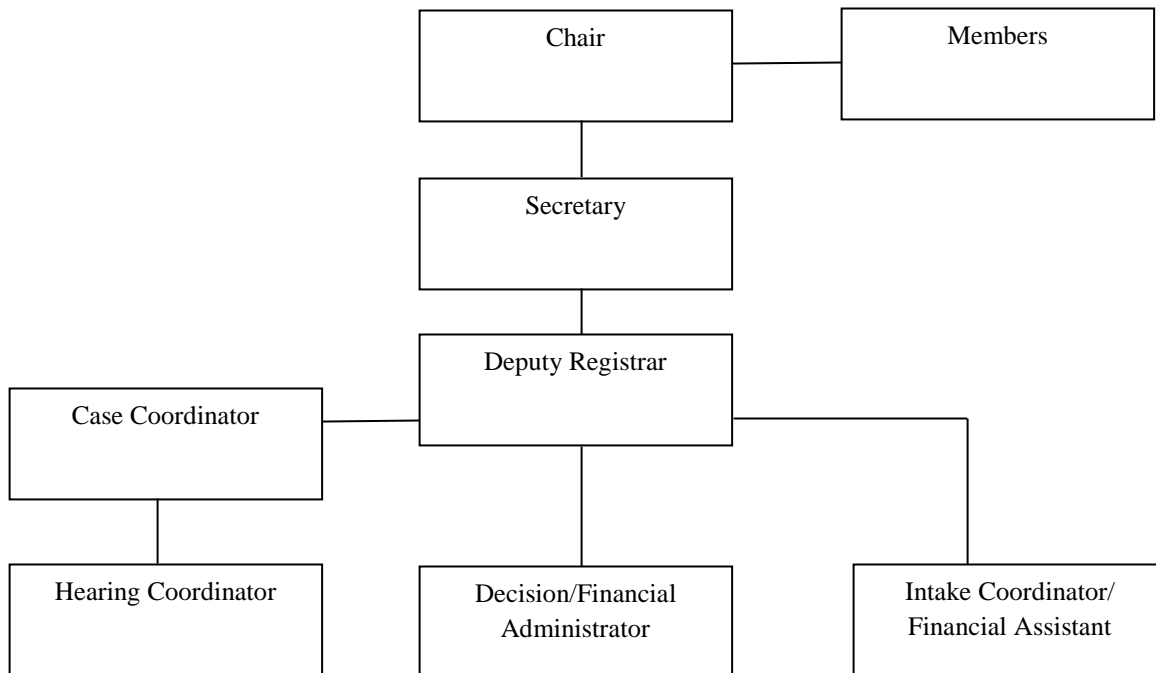

2. Human Resources

The Secretary

Caroline Goodwin

Caroline Goodwin has over 30 years of experience as an administrator in the labour relations field, commencing her OPS career with the Grievance Settlement Board. During her career, she gained broad experience through secondments with the Ministry of Labour, Finance and Administration Branch, the Human Rights Tribunal of Ontario, and the Pay Equity Hearings Tribunal. She has served as the Board's secretary since 2003.

4. Overview of Activities

PSGB Mission Statement

To provide appropriate dispute resolution services to management/excluded employees and their employers in a fair, impartial and expeditious manner and promote harmonious labour relations in the Ontario Public Service.

Overview of Programs and Activities

By statute, the PSGB is comprised of a minimum of a part-time Chair and two part-time Members. Members of the PSGB bring to it extensive experience as both labour mediators and arbitrators.

The administrative functions of the PSGB are performed by a full-time administrative staff under the direction of the Board's Secretary. For those who use the PSGB's dispute resolution services, the first point of contact is with its administrative staff.

Once a complaint has been filed with the PSGB, mediation is usually the first step in the Board's dispute resolution process. A confidential mediation session provides the opportunity for complainants and their employer to resolve complaints in an expeditious and informal manner. A large proportion of complaints are now successfully resolved through the PSGB's mediation process conducted by one of the Board's members (Chair or Member).

If a complaint cannot be resolved through mediation, it is then scheduled for a full adjudicative hearing. At these hearings, evidence and arguments are presented in a more formal manner. A member of the PSGB (Chair or Member) will preside over the hearing, deal with procedural and evidentiary issues, listen to the evidence and argument, and then prepare a written decision. In more complicated cases the hearing could take longer than one day.

Whether mediation or adjudication is used, it is always the primary concern of the PSGB that complaints be resolved in a fair, impartial, and expeditious manner.
